April's Fool Celebration

On Tuesday night in the dining room the first of April was observed in an unique way. Imagine the consternation when, instead of the usually well-set tables, the tables were only set with cups (without handles) in place of glasses; saucers instead of dinner plates, and tablespoons for knives and forks. Still further dismay ensued when one attempted to cut meat, spread butter and serve one's self with the same identical spoon. At the end, the spoons were removed and instead every one was given a fork with which to eat jello and whipped cream. But it was a most entertaining way to end the day of foolishness, and every one derived much enjoyment from it. Miss Edwards is always most ingenious in observing the various holidays in some fashion in the dining room.
