crew, both during rehearsal and performances. Backstage crowding and the need to share dressing areas will also be minimized during the season's earlier months.

As government mandates or restrictions evolve, the season will continue to be re-evaluated. The safety of our staff, volunteers, students and patrons remains our top priority.

Two plays will open sooner than planned. Two musicals and another play are to open later. Eight shows keep the same places on the calendar.

We are committed to a number of giving initiatives, including our support of the arts like the Omaha Community Playhouse. The arts enrich us, give us personal joy, well-being and inspiration, while helping to drive and build our community in so many ways. Our lives and our community need the arts, perhaps now more than ever.

We value our partnership with the Omaha Community Playhouse and are proud to continue our support in the days ahead. And we look forward to seeing our community bask once again in the rich storytelling and theatrical experience offered by the exceptional talent of the Omaha Community Playhouse."
