the curtains
aren't closed

While our buildings remain dark during this challenging time of separation, our teams are working to provide inspiration and connection with you to the artists and performing arts you love.

We invite you to join us online for #Opainterlude masterclasses, workshops, live entertainment and more.

We truly appreciate you connecting with us from afar. It's important to us that we continue to work behind the scenes to provide you with resources and to ensure extraordinary performances and programs when our theaters re-open and we are all united once again.

As a non-profit, we would be most grateful for your support to help us continue our important work. Thank you for your commitment and generosity to O-pa during this unprecedented time.

The curtains aren't closed, this is only the interlude – a pause on our stages as we connect with you online. Check out the link below for all upcoming digital learning and live entertainment opportunities.

O-pa Spotlight: Artist in Residence and Advisor Ray Mercer

O-pa's Artist in Residence and Advisor Ray Mercer has helped us to build our dance programming tremendously over the past year through workshops and performances with metro middle schoolers and our Nebraska High School Theater Academy students. Get to know him and learn why he feels it's important to give back to the community that nurtured his passion for dance.

What's Coming Up: Live on the Stream

Some dynamic musicians are coming to you with O-pa "Live on the Stream" series. On Wednesdays at 12:00 PM and Saturdays at 6:00 PM, we have a line-up of artists ready to give you a live virtual performance. This Saturday at 6:00 PM, join us on Facebook* and enjoy local artist Elaine Stoner, a professional musician and educator who is invariably referred to as "the voice of an angel."

*You do not need a Facebook account to watch these performances. Simply head to our page to view.
