The general offices and display-rooms of Steger & Sons Piano Manufacturing Company are housed in the 19-story Steger Building, at the Northwest Corner of Wabash Avenue & Jackson Boulevard, "The Piano Center of America." From an architectural standpoint, the Steger Building constitutes one of the finest examples of modern fire-proof construction in Chicago.

The immense Steger factories, located at Steger, Illinois (where the "Lincoln" and "Dixie" highways meet), the largest piano factories in the world, are equipped with every machine or device, which will assist in turning out better work, at the same time minimizing production costs. If the size of its plant were the only measure of its greatness, the Steger Institution would still hold a commanding position in the piano-world; its factories including lumber yards occupying over 32 acres.

Gentlemen:—

For the last year and a half I have used a Steger Piano in my studio for teaching and accompanying the voice. During this period the piano has been subjected to the most exacting tests and strenuous studio usage.

It has easily met every demand made, proving its artistic and rugged construction and retains the wonderful quality of tone which is the heritage of Steger-built pianos. It is a pleasure to use a piano with such exquisite quality of tone, dependable action, in fact—a piano that is so all-satisfying, and I recommend it most heartily to musicians and music-lovers.

Sincerely,

LeRoy Irving Wetzel
