

Two Territorial Secretaries.

You know, doubtless, that Elwood Evans was recently appointed Secretary of the Territory. Well, Mr. Evans presented his commission to L. J. S. Turney, and desired him to turn over the books, records, etc., of the Secretary's office. This Turney refused to do, because Evans has not filed a bond. No bond came with the commission, nothing was said about one, and Evans claims that he is entitled to the office without filing a bond, unless required to do so by the Department at Washington. Evans has written to the Department for instructions, and in the meantime both Evans and Turney are claiming and exercising the right to act.

COMING ALONG.
