
LINCOLN SALUTE.—On last Saturday morning, some of our citizens, exultant over the election of Lincoln, news of which came to hand on Thursday evening, fired a salute, accompanied with cheering, for each of the free States. Unfortunately for the patriotism of the participants in the glorification, they could not give vent to their joy by burning powder alone, but must needs call in the aid of some fighting whisky, which soon had the usual effect. By the time each State was honored with a salute, the whisky had got the better of the Lincolnites, several of whom felt called upon to exhibit in a striking manner their exuberant joy. Some three or four encounters took place, in which a siwash and klootchman, one constable and one private citizen, were placed hors de combat, in rather battered condition. Black eyes and discolored jaws were prominent objects for some days afterward. One individual, who created the greater part of this diversion, was charged by Justice Rabbeson about $160 for his share of the fun, and, though he squirmed under the charge, was compelled to foot the bill. The salute would have passed off very pleasantly, had it not been for John Alcohol, who invariably causes trouble on such occasions.
