summer 2K13.

Buena Vista students are always seeking opportunities to make their summers matter. The Fourth of July parade is an event for both locals and tourists alike. For the Buena Vista students, the Fourth is an annual event that is enjoyed from atop a float as well as from the busy sidewalks. Students scatter across Main Street while watching the little kids run for candy, and perhaps collecting some sweet treats for themselves. Reminiscing the times when they would also decorate their bikes with streamers and ride in the parade, the teenagers of BVHS enjoy this snapshot of a familiar childhood memory during the Fourth of July parade. Although finding a high schooler on a tricycle is uncommon, many students find other ways to participate in this annual event, such as driving a float or even riding on one. Another favored summer event that students so eagerly participate in is County Fair. At this year's fair, Brook McFarland won Grand Champion for her sheep. Madelyne Cope also saddled up for success this summer and received Reserved Grand Champion for her steer. Aside from fair fun and Fourth of July frenzies, many student athletes head off to sports camp over the summer. The volleyball, basketball, wrestling, football, cross country and track teams attended camps all throughout the state and even crossed borders to build their success.

breaking the ICE.

Every year the 8th grade class takes a new step in their lives as they enter the world of high school. This journey is completely new and often strange, which is why Freshman Orientation is such a significant event. Held by the Link Crew leaders and Ms. Shane, the freshmen spend an entire morning getting to know the ropes at BVHS. Link Crew leaders, an outstanding group of juniors and seniors chosen to introduce high school to its new students, get to know the incoming freshmen and make them feel comfortable and excited about this new chapter in their lives. During freshmen orientation, the new, wild-eyed students partake in songs, group projects, and numerous other activities in order to break the ice.

"Freshman orientation was a lot of fun because you got to meet some upper classmen and get a feel for the school and the community," says freshman, Hayden Gibb (right). Abby Schoger (left) says, "I enjoyed freshman orientation because it helped me learn about the school and know where to go."

"Freshman Orientation was awkward. It was fun and helpful, but still awkward. I don't like to talk," says Freshman Khyllie Trevillyan as she participates in the opening "ice breaker" game at freshmen orientation.

In this picture, junior Link Crew leader, Hannah Foreman, interacts with freshman, Kathryn Jordan. Kathryn says, "It was not what I expected, which isn't a bad thing."

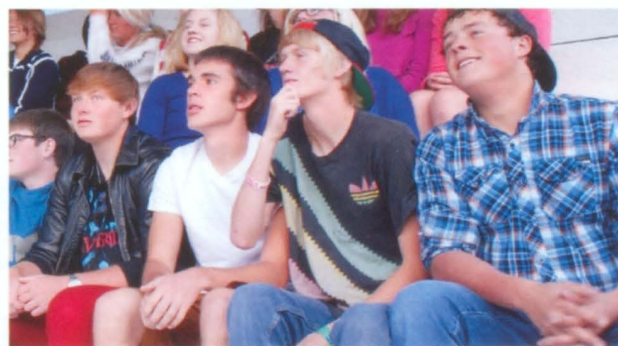

senior SUNRISE.

Seniors Elle Eggleston and Sarah Taft begin their last first day of high school. Sarah says, "Fellow classmates, it was wonderful waking up at the break of dawn and getting to spend the frigid morning of our last year of high school together. And then the sun never rose. Good day!"

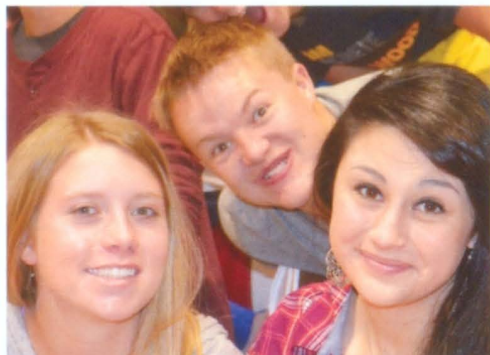

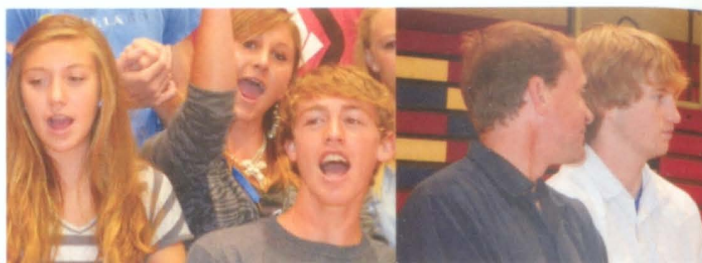

Almost the entire senior class was able to come together to embark on the journey of what would be their last year of high school. The senior class attended the annual senior sunrise on August 22, 2013, the first day of their senior year. They watched a beautiful sunrise while enjoying donuts and coffee. They began the "last" first day of their high school career, united. The beginning of a year that everyone will always remember and the year where everyone's focus became what really MATTERS.

new BEGINNINGS

A Clean Slate

Each year, a "first day" assembly is held for all students and staff. First day jitters are replaced with stories of R.C Cola, Slim Jims and Moon Pies, boys in bikinis, and laughs all around. In the top left photo, John Lopez performs a cheer routine to pump up the crowd. Below, Baylee Johnson, Brandon Fairchild, and Angel Accaira pose for a first day photo. In the top right photo, Andrew McFarland performs a "How to Fail High School" skit alongside other senior and junior students. Student Council President Sammi Jewell presents the students with a speech regarding acceptance and success that is threaded through the walls of BVHS.

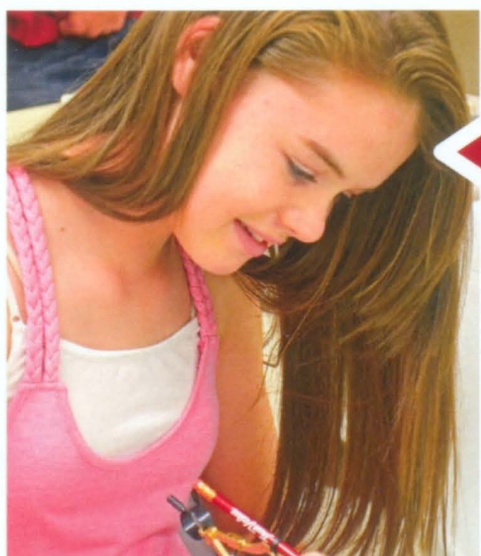

"Doing the skit for the student body at the beginning of the year was a great experience."
-Colin Johnson, 12th grade

First Day Jitters

On August 22nd, students woke to dread or delight as they dressed in their newly bought clothes, packed up their locker shelves and binders and headed off to the first day of a new school year. An assembly kicked this new beginning into motion. Many of the seniors put on a short, comedic skit outlining the most encouraged ways to fail high school which included many jokes and even some disturbing sights. Students and staff members repeatedly recited a short story that told of Moon Pies and extra long Slim Jims and the school fight song echoed through the walls of the gym. The photo to the left displays the undying school spirit of the BVHS students while chanting the school fight song. Seniors introduced the teachers and convinced the rest of the student body what an excellent staff that the high school is lucky to have. An exciting beginning to the new school year ensured that excellent achievements await each and every student at Buena Vista High School this coming year. Freshman Hayden Gibb explains, "I am very excited about starting high school because there is a better sense of community and unity within the student body." She couldn't be more accurate. The freshman class is made up of 61 individuals approaching their last 4 years of schooling in the Buena Vista School District, and we will also say goodbye to 43 seniors, the class of 2014.

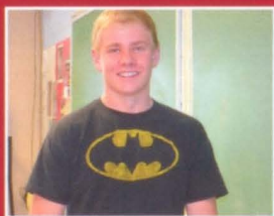

"I was super excited coming into high school. I expected a lot of things to be different."

show your PRIDE.

Before the glamorous gowns, the frenzied football fans, or the presentation of the royal crown, homecoming weekend was kicked into motion with a powderpuff football game, pep rally, and bonfire. The BVHS annual pep rally was held on the Friday of homecoming weekend. After the girls finished powderpuff, all the athletes participating in a fall sport sauntered down to the football field to be recognized for their efforts. The football, volleyball, soccer, gymnastics, cheer, cross country, and swim teams were introduced. Each coach had the chance to rant and rave about how great their athletes are and how each season has been playing out. Some sports even had special shows for the rest of the BVHS fans. With the student's spirit practically bursting through the seams of the stadium, it was sure to be a weekend of excitement.

The gymnastics team showcased their talent at the pep rally by presenting small routines for the crowd and students. Lindsey Fagerberg lands a front handspring in the photo on the right. Other gymnasts that performed the night of the pep rally included Emily Foreman, Sammi Scott, Mimi Rodriguez, Kathryn Jordan, Berlin VanNess, and Shawnee VanNess.

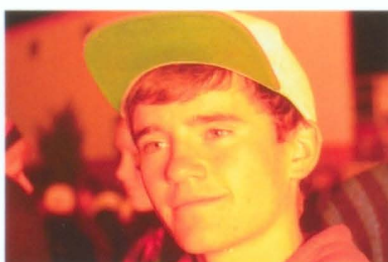

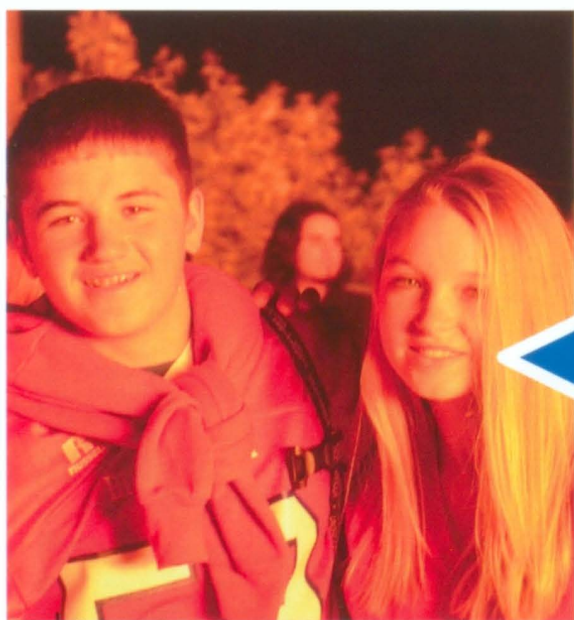

These boys showed their pride, for both the Demons and the Spartans, as they choose to play soccer for Salida High School due to the lack of a team at BVHS. This included Dustin Linza, Josh McGill, Kevin Scheidt, and Lukas Ommen.

"The annual bonfire is an event that BVHS students and staff look forward to year after year, it's a great place for students to mingle and get excited for the upcoming game. " -Ashley Blankenbeckler, 11th Grade.

rivalry SPARKS.

Flames and expectations rose as the homecoming game against the Salida Spartans neared. Hundreds of pieces of plywood and a Spartan helmet burned in the homecoming bonfire that reached over 20 feet high. Laura Wolfe, Kenneth Schell, Thomas Enck, Lindsey Fagerberg, Kevin Scheidt, Sarah Pascarelli, and Chaz Tipton were the "torch bearers" who had the elite privilege of igniting the 2013 Inferno. Fire fighters were on standby to control anything that got out of hand. Students from the high school, middle school, and elementary school, along with onlookers, stood in awe at the spectacular sight. Sparks from the fire obviously struck fear in the Spartans as we burned them on the football field, 52-6, the following afternoon in the homecoming football game. The annual bonfire never ceases to attract an enormous crowd and unify the incredible school spirit and pride that surrounds Buena Vista High School.

Silhouettes were cast from the fire onto students and bystanders watching the rising flames. There wasn't much left of the fire once it was put out; just ashes, singed plywood, and a melted Spartan helmet, putting an end to a hot Friday night.

ROYALS.

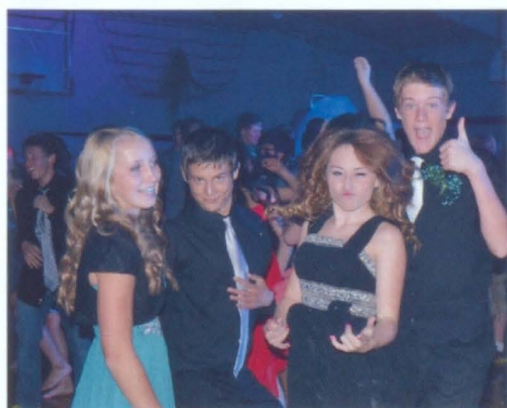

During halftime of the Demon-Spartan rivalry Homecoming game, the candidates for Homecoming royalty were announced as everyone anxiously awaited the results. The Second Attendants were Karissa Wentz and Thomas Enck, First Attendants were Lindsey Fagerberg and Will Osborne and the 2013 Homecoming King and Queen were Natalie Tanner and Jamie Stout.

On the bitter cold morning of September 28th, each class (except the sophomores) met at the softball field to board their floats for the annual Homecoming Parade. The juniors placed first with their viking themed float. Seniors placed second and freshmen came in third. The sophomores were awarded no points due to their failure to enter a float.

After ending the exciting week with a big win over Salida, it was time to top it all off with the homecoming dance. Students arrived at the gym to discover that Student Council had decked the gym out in "Neverland" themed decorations that left everyone with dreams of a night full of dancing and fun. However, it went from fairy tale to horror story when a few glass decorations shattered and cut the feet of the dancers who ditched their shoes. All in all, it was great week to be a Demon.

leaving a LEGACY.

In small towns, and small schools, we like to have something to call our own, something that we look forward to every upcoming school year, something we call traditions. Painting the rock after every victorious football game, or going to free lunch every Wednesday, are only two of the countless activities that each student comes together to do. Whether you're in the stands cheering or on the court playing, the students always give it all they've got. Handmade signs and "BVHS!" cheers fill the gym, the field, or the stadium as the students show their love for their family on the court. Everyone supports everyone. It's a small community with a huge heart where everyone looks out for one another.

Thirty years from now, when a football season much more difficult than they could have ever imagined is well in their past, the group of young men that lined the football field every Friday night won't remember which plays to call out when they're matched up face to face against their opponent. They won't remember the subzero temperatures of late fall freezing up their noses behind red helmets adorned with their achievements. But there is one thing that will be remembered. They will never forget the coach that taught them to love their sport. Even after his passing, Dwayne Johnson's legacy was showcased more than once, in the most remarkable of ways. October 4th, in Rye, Colorado, as frosted snowflakes fell from black skies over a lit football field, a white sign that held Coach Johnson's name whipped in the wind- a symbol of victory to the small team who won an astonishing game by one point in overtime. Only the following week at the home stadium, the Demons were able to hold off Peyton at the 1 yard line, keeping their challenger's final score at 8. Weeks later at Fossil Ridge High school, Fort Collins, BVHS was able to take home a noteworthy last minute victory, solidifying their spot in the semifinal 1A football bracket. It may be that this is a dedicated, talented team. It may also be that even though exhaustion and fatigue from the season had hit these players harder than a snow storm, they stepped onto the field, and they summed up every bit of strength they could. And, carrying the legacy of Dwayne Johnson, this resilient group of high school athletes got back on their freaking horse.

This year, the four seniors, Kaylynn Tucker, Ashle White, Elle Eggleston, and Laura Wolfe share a hug with their parents before beginning the last home volleyball game they will play. Sophomore Jesse Osborne says, "This year's seniors were a huge contribution to our team. They were fantastic leaders on and off the floor and they will be greatly missed next year."

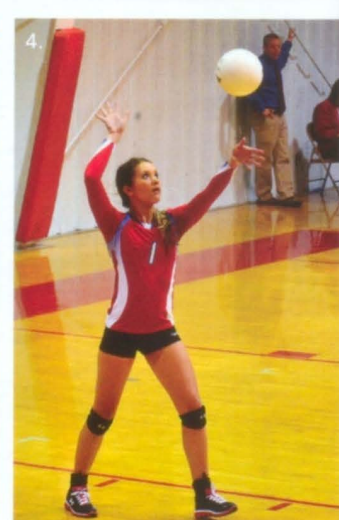

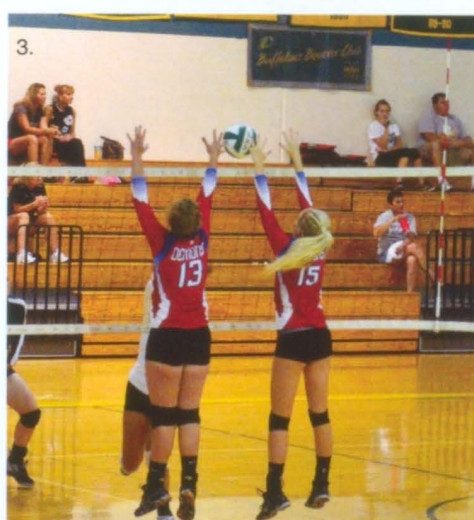

The C Team, JV, and Varsity all saw great success during their home game vs. Fountain Valley. Senior Elle Eggleston passes the ball, sophomore Jesse Osborne prepares for her attack, as junior Cassidy DeFurio fakes out her opponent.

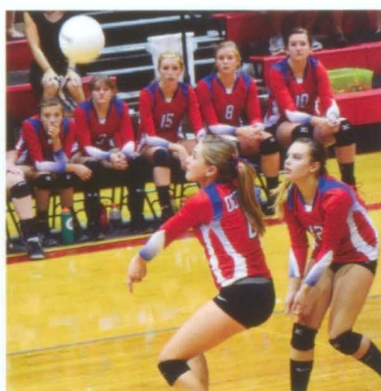

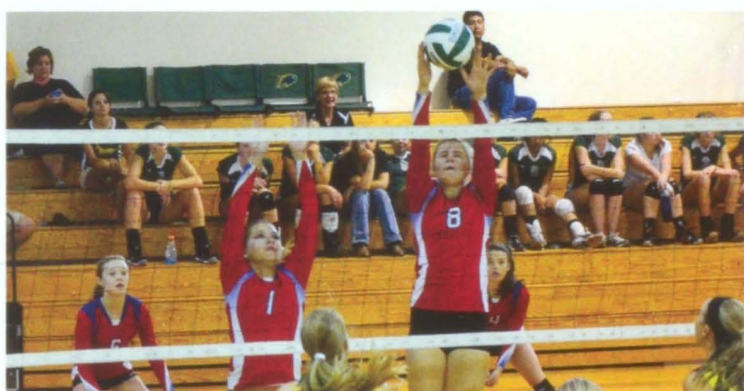

Determined sophomore Emily Perez digs the ball, while Junior, Rylie Troutdt stands close by waiting to assist. This, alongside other fantastic plays and a desire to be the best, led to a win against Fountain Valley.

1. Cody Luebke goes up for a spike, Alicia Dooley (left) and Jaymi Doke (right) assist.
2. Arden Bardol (left) and Greer Franklin (right) jumping up for a block.
3. Kaylynn Tucker (left) and Elle Eggleston (right) defend their court by going up for a block against Bishop Machebeuf.
4. Alex Drake focuses on an ace and a point for her team.

You can hit on us but you can't score. "I don't want to be known as just a player, I want to be known as the girl that left her entire heart on the court," said sophomore Emily Perez. For the third consecutive year, the girls' volleyball team made it to the Regional Tournament. "We really unified as a team through playing together and believing in each other, which lead to our trip to Regionals," junior Shelby Jensen says. In the Regional Tournament, the BV girls faced off against Fort Lupton and Sterling. In the first match, BV lost in 3 very close games against Sterling. The girls then battled in three hard games against Fort Lupton, but came up short in all three. "I want to be the girl that gives her all to play for the girls right next to her," Riley Shawhan, junior. The team finished the season with an overall record of 9-13 and a league record of 6-6. I am very proud of how far we came as a team this year, and I cannot wait to see how much further we go next year," says junior Cori Scott.

first to FINISH.

Who's the only group of people faster than Speedy Gonzales? Our Buena Vista Cross Country team, of course! The team had a great fall season with the boys placing 4th overall at Regionals and finishing 10th at State, along with the girls placing 5th at Regionals and 15th at State, it's no wonder they are called the Speed Demons! "I really like our cross country team because there is a lot of unity between all of us," said freshman Whitney White.

The cross country team really showed off their speed by placing high in their races. With extremely hard and diligent work, much of the team placed in the top ten. Whitney White placed 1st at one of the meets! "Every night before our meets we would all hang out and have dinner," says Brooke Walters. "We pushed each other a lot and talked to each other during the races to motivate each other." According to the team, unity was a huge part in the races and even after the season. From team dinners to just hanging out before the races, this wasn't just a team, it was a family.

Sarah Pascarelli, 12th grade Even though Sarah was the only senior cross country girl runner, she stepped up and became an outstanding leader for the team.

Senior Evan Walters has run cross country all four years of high school. He has had an outstanding overall record in BVHS, some of his best places were 7th at Buena Vista and 13th at TCA. "We go really far, farther than anyone else," he says.

2013 proved to be a successful year for the BVHS gymnastics team. The gymnasts recieved their highest score in eight years with a score of 148.95 at Alamosa High School. The girls, placing 7th at regionals, missed going to state as a team due to a scoring fluke. This did not deter our gymnasts, though. Five girls qualified for the State competition and brought home high scores and continuing excitement for the BVHS gymnastics program.

In the second round of the play offs, junior Dustin Linza hammers the ball downfield to his awaiting teammates. The Spartans continued on to defeat Holy Family, with the final score of 3-0.

This year, seven dedicated BVHS boys traveled to Salida to add some Demon skills to the Spartan boys soccer team. Together, this team was unstoppable as they entered the playoffs undefeated. In the semi-finals the boys had the chance to take on TCA again, but fell to them with a score of 1-0. Although this loss was devastating, Junior Josh McGill keeps his head high, "this season was one of our best seasons yet, and the best since I have been a part of the team. I wish that we could have made it passed the semi-finals but am proud of how far we got."

Putts & Ruts

From tire tracks to Tiger Woods, mountain biking and golf are two adventurous sports that the school has to offer. For Jon Fox, the mountain biking season slammed into him, literally! While riding his bike out of a parking lot, Jon was hit by a white Camry. "She just drove off," quotes Jon Fox. "I was the victim of a hit and run." Unlike Jon, Tanner Harbick chose candles over crime during his golf season. During the week of regionals, Tanner's birthday was celebrated. "We went to Texas Roadhouse. They gave me a birthday cake and the waitress came over and sang to me," Tanner says. Niki Koch, junior cheerleader, also has exciting stories from her fall sport. Once, when practicing at a church, Niki and the rest of her cheer team heard a loud crash. Sarah Navarette had hit a car in the parking lot. "My coach didn't even react. She just told us to 'hit the mats,'" Niki tells as she recaps the exciting moment.

forever in our THOUGHTS.

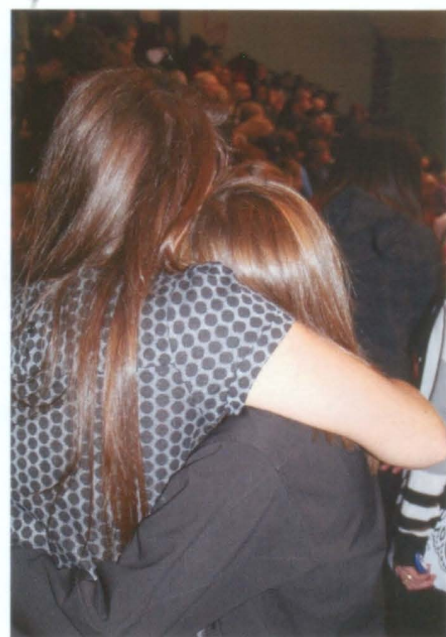

"Dream big - don't let the world dictate your aspirations. Be certain, be strong, be absolute and unwavering in what you believe. Believe in positive things. Be passionate about life. Be compassionate. Develop empathy. Develop an attitude of gratitude. Finish what you start. Don't lie. Don't cheat. Seek joy and satisfaction in all that you do, it is there if you look. Life is about the journey, enjoy the process. Laugh - a lot.

BV Strong.

September 30th, 2013 was a day that the town of Buena Vista will not soon forget. On this day, our community lost 3 of the greatest people it has known; coaches, mentors, parents, sisters, and, above all, friends. In the years that they have spent here, the Johnson family made an impact on this community that will never fade. Dawna, Dwayne, and Kiowa-Rain have touched and bettered the lives of countless people and these people are now doing what they can to repay the eternal debt that they owe to this family. The support, love, and compassion that has been shown after that fateful Monday has been unimaginable. The support by rival Salida during an away volleyball game, the cards and money that were sent from all over the world, the prayers, the hugs, and most of all, the perfect memorial only begin to cover the compassion that was shown after such a tragedy. This all mimicked the way that the Johnson's lived their lives: kind, giving, and grateful. After all of this sorrow and heartbreak, the most important thing to remember is that Dawna, Dwayne and Kiowa-Rain will live in in our hearts and our minds and we will continue to remain BV Strong.

Work and work hard, but make sure it's for the right reasons. Don't fear failure. Create a life that is yours. You will be disappointed, you will be knocked down, you will be disillusioned, you will experience great pain and great loss, these are tests - be strong, believe, have faith, persevere, LIVE. Strive constantly to reach your potential in all that you do. Find your purpose in life, we are all designated for a very specific, finite purpose. Avoid negativity like it wants to kill you and eat your brain because it does. Don't leave anything on the table. Have no regrets. Take risks. Smile. Face your fears and problems. Don't make excuses. Feed your soul. Relax and enjoy. Love more than you think is safe. Always get back on the horse." -Dwayne Johnson, 2013

From auditions to memorizing lines, blocking to the stress of opening night, students who participate in drama work hard for weeks to produce a successful show while attempting not to break a leg at the same time! This fall, the Advanced Drama class put on the play 1984 based on the novel by George Orwell. This play addresses the issues of society and whether or not the government can have too much power and violate our most basic human rights. Many students of all grades helped to put the wonderful show together. While most advanced drama students acted on stage, some chose to stay behind the red curtain and help backstage. The basic drama class participated on production crews, and it's no secret that the work backstage is just as important as what is happening on stage.

"It was interesting and exciting to play a character that was so different than myself," says Michael Hatfield. Michael played the part of O'Brian who is an old friend of Julia, played by Kristina Tanner. Julia tricks the two main characters into becoming traitors of their government.

Senior Colin Johnson received the lead part of Winston Smith. Smith, a seemingly loyal party member, later turns out to be against Big Brother and the life he has invented for all of Oceania. "It wasn't your typical high school show, but it was really cool to play a character that had so many dimensions," says Johnson.

open books and OPEN MINDS.

Though we are only a school of 301 students, the variety of classes that are offered is remarkable. From calculus to cooking, studying plant and animal life to understanding music and the arts, students have an endless amount of freedom to express their individuality. Junior Sera McFarland says, "There's an opportunity for everyone here that enables them to follow their passion and do what they want to do." Students who attend BVHS leave high school and are prepared to build a future that is as bright as the minds that will create it. Our teachers are selectively chosen to help students achieve their full potential, no matter the circumstances. Mr. Keidel says, "I strive to make the kids who feel invisible, visible." BVHS is truly a unique family. "We have a close relationship with students. We care. There is a bond here that is unlike any school I've taught at," remarks Physical Education teacher, Mr. Drawbridge.

Mrs. Bunce's Language Arts class is hard at work, except Dylan Jewell. Over the year, the Language Arts I classes learn about short stories, writing structure, and literature such as Romeo and Juliet.

Cooper Armstrong and Tucker Lindsay enjoy their time in the shops building. Wood and Metal shops teaches our BVHS students how to use their hands to build anything they want.

On October 10th, the annual Academic Award banquet was held to honor students who excelled academically and who scored proficient and advanced on the state TCAP tests.

the final COUNTDOWN.

Senior Will Osborne, a member of the 2013 champion lownet team, saves the ball in order to keep the rally going, which ensures his team's place in the finals. Will says, "Lownet is probably the best sport that has not yet been introduced into the Olympics." According to Will, it's all about the way you look. If you look good, you're gonna win. No joke.

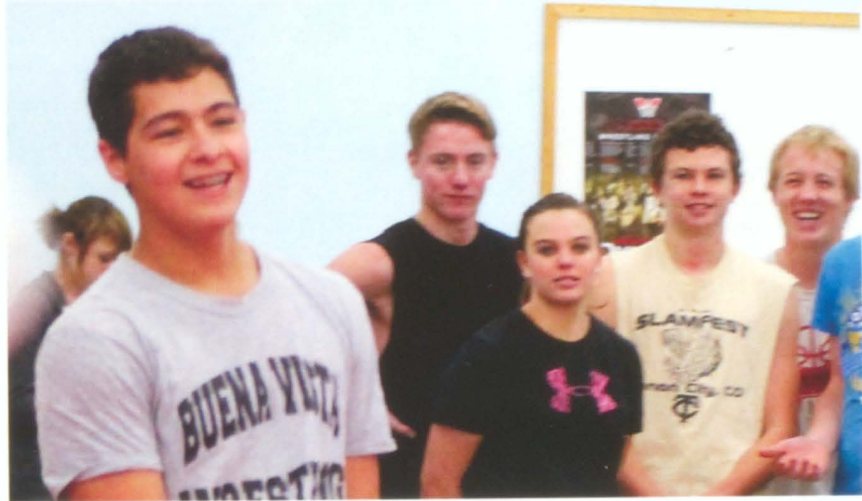

Cheyenne Hargrove, one of the very few girls brave enough to join a lownet team for the tournament, prepares to hit the ball, scoring a point for her team. Unfortunately, Cheyenne's team was cheated out of their opportunity to play in the semi-finals.

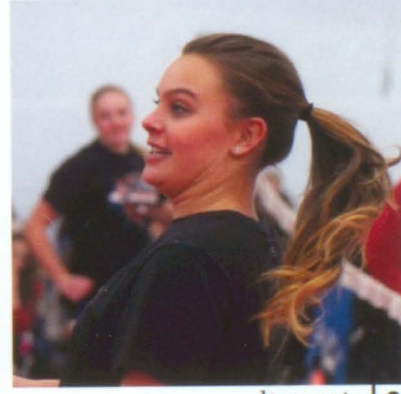

After seven games of lownet over the course of four prep periods, the victors were announced. Will Osborne, Laura Wolfe, Lindsey Fagerberg, Dustin Linza, Trevor Close, Sawyer Huffman and Andrew McFarland won the tournament. This A2 weights class, except for Will, spent every other day together for an hour and a half creating strategies and trick plays for the tournament. The winners got t-shirts and permanent bragging rights...until next year, that is.

For most high schools, finals week consists of intense studying, extremely long tests, and grades that come down to the wire. While this might be slightly true at BVHS, the last week of the semester has taken on an entirely new meaning. The annual Lownet Tournament takes place during the 30 minute prep period throughout the final week of the semester. Students create their own teams with whoever they want (the boys must include at least one girl on each team) and after weeks of stacking the best teams and recruiting only the top "lowneters," the tournament bracket was finalized. Monday, the first day of testing, came all too soon and the exams began. However, this also meant the beginning of the tournament. When the first bell rang, the audience filed into the wrestling room where the action was about to start. The players took their positions on the mat and Mr. Drawbridge, in his official attire, blew the first whistle and the games were underway!

For the remaining prep periods during the week, the tournament went on and teams fought their hardest for the title: 2013 Lownet Tournament Champions. The week went on and some teams were victorious while others were eliminated. In the final game on the last day, the remaining two teams rallied, served, and blocked their way to the end of the match. After the final ball rolled across the mat, the winners were crowned!

Junior Patrick Huffman puts on his game face as he anticipates the volley of the opposing team and sets himself up to block the hit barreling toward him. Unfortunately, Patrick's team lost in the elimination games and didn't get to play in the finals.

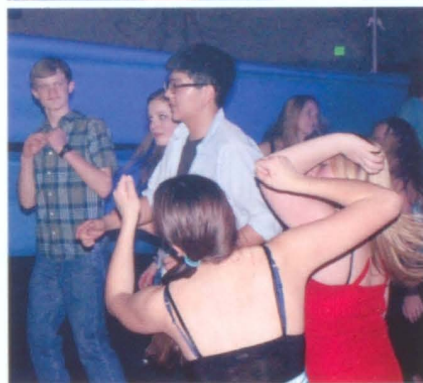

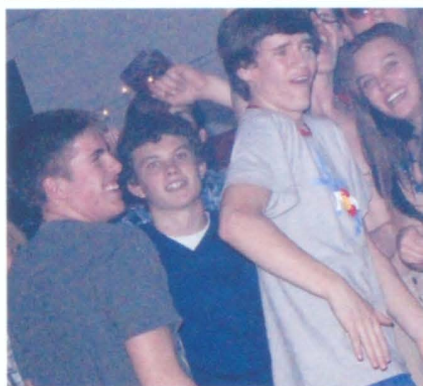

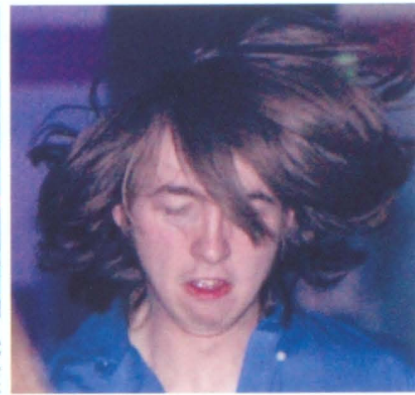

mighty APHRODITE.

It's Valentine's Day and love is in the air at BVHS. Happy couples can be seen throughout the halls as their relationships are cherished and celebrated. However, February 14th isn't all about the couples. Friends send StuCo Val-o-Grams, candy, and flowers to each other and it becomes a day that everyone can enjoy. Well, except Sallie Tucker, her Val-o-Gram brings a grimace rather than a smile.

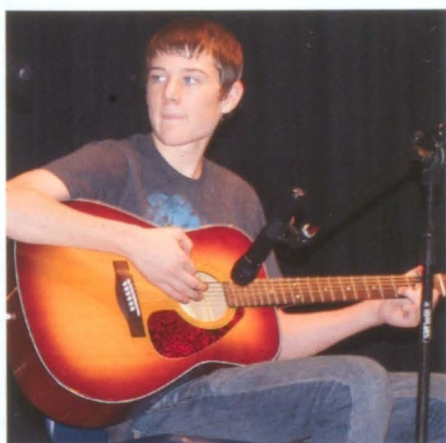

dancing through LIFE.

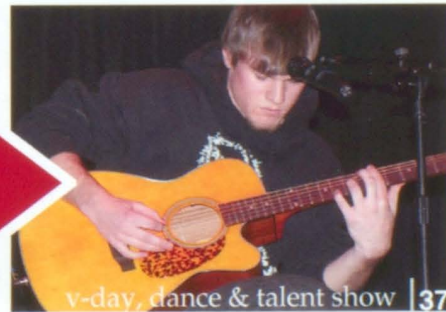

Unlike the real Titanic, you won't need a life-jacket for the 2014 NHS dance. This year, the students at BVHS were able to experience the Titanic in gowns and glamour. Lights twinkled above the deck, icebergs floated through the sea, and balloon anchors truly set the mood. "It was surely an unsinkable night!" according to sophomore passenger Gracie Graham.

This winter contained a semester full of must-see nights, which also included the annual Talent Show. Some of the talents included Niklas Armstrong on his guitar, Charlotte Ryen singing, and many more. "It was a fun experience listening to the musicians," says Annika Jensen, who played the night away on her violin and changed a boring Monday night into an exciting show.

Every year, February 14th proves to be a day full of love at Buena Vista High School. All day balloons and chocolate hearts fillup the lockers as emotion fills the hallways. Unfortunately, it wasn't all love according to Charlotte Ryen, "The only flower I got on Valentine's Day was from my sister and I had to pay her."

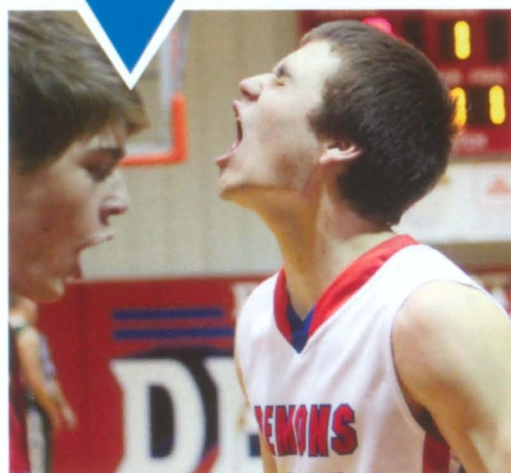

Each year, many incredible talents are showcased in front of the student body at the annual BVHS Talent Show. From songs to strumming, the BVHS students never cease to amaze the crowd when standing in the spotlight. This year, Kevin Scheidt brought home the gold with his stunning guitar piece. Colin Johnson and Amy Hawthorne landed second for their performance with their ukeleles, and Claire Erickson came up third with a presentation of an original song.

straight BALLIN'.

As cheers radiate off of the bench of the boy's varsity basketball team, Will Osborne, 12th grade, commented, "We cheer because the bench needs to encourage players and help them to get pumped up, which makes us play better." With celebrations after every basket made, the Buena Vista boys varsity basketball team are easily the most spirited guys on the floor.

Every game the BVHS basketball boys play is an amazing portrayal of their skill and teamwork. Buena Vista fans flock into the stands to support the guys and to watch them put on a fantastic show. With stuffs, three-point celebrations, and the bench cheering just as loud as the crowd, it's no secret that the guys basketball teams are all full of adrenaline and love for the game. Their spirits rise every time they win a game, yet their pride remains even when they lose. From freshman all the way up to seniors, these boys never stop hustling. Their effort, dignity, and determination are a fantastic representation of student athletes at BVHS.

The boys basketball program is made up of more than just teams, they've developed a brotherhood. Between team dinners and special handshakes before the huddle, from C-team to varsity, there is always support. "I think the reason we're so close is because we're friends off the court, we hang out whenever we can which has helped us to bond. These guys are my family," says point guard Kenneth Schell, 11th grade.

This year, the girls basketball team faced unimaginable obstacles both on and off the court. During the 2013-2014 season, there would be one face missing from the inseparable team and one jersey that would hang on the wall rather than be on the floor. "Play for Kiowa" became the teams motivation and their teal socks that read "Get on your horse" was a constant reminder of their beloved teammate and their desire to play for her. Kiowa-Rain was a huge part of the Lady Demons basketball program from day one and she will continue to be with them until that last buzzer sounds. In the beginning of the season, the girls set five goals for their upcoming season: It's not about where you start, it's about where you finish. Be hungry for the game. Finish; finish everything. Be all in. And of course, play for someone other than yourself. It was obvious that the team kept these goals in mind as they finished a great season. According to Junior Rylie Troudt, "We played as a new team. We played our hearts out. As a team goal, we wanted to play for someone other than ourselves. We did that, we played for Kiowa-Rain. Every game I would remember that goal and think how different it would be if she was only here to play with us." The girls advanced from regular season and took on Ellicott at home in order to secure a spot at the district tournament. After they received a win, the girls traveled to Pueblo Central. Their season was unfortunately cut short after two losses at this tournament, but the Lady Demons had a great run. One of the most memorable moments from this season, however, did not occur during the playoffs, but instead on February 11th: senior night. Before the tip off, Coach Gates told the Lady Demons that he was going to do something that he had never done before. Instead of the starting five girls stepping on to the court to begin the game, only four made their way to center court. Whispers ran through the crowd as everyone wondered what Coach Gates was doing. What the crowd didn't know was that there was in fact five players on the floor. Kiowa would have been the fifth starter and the other four girls knew that she was right next to each of them on the court. In the first play of the game, the demons won the jump, and scored a quick lay-up. The crowd erupted and everyone in the gym immediately knew that Kiowa was watching over them running up and down the court with her team.

Some people don't understand how the average teenage boy could devote his entire winter, Monday through Saturday, to a sport that forces him to sacrifice so much. Some people don't understand why anyone would choose to drop weight just so they are able to wrestle. Some people don't understand the early mornings, the late nights, the pain, the suffering, but these minor sacrifices do not faze the wrestlers of Buena Vista High School. They continue to show up every morning and every afternoon from early November until late February. They spend every second they have getting takedowns or lifting weights while thinking of one thing: the Pepsi Center. The last three days of the season the boys who qualified at the regional tournament will load buses and vans to begin their long journey to the podium. This year seven BVHS wrestlers, Cameron Wolters, Denver Hargrove, Sabyn Diamond, Patrick Huffman, John Lopez, Keegan Wentz, and Antonio Navarrette, advanced to the state tournament. They each battled to stay alive through many different six minute matches, always looking ahead to their spot on the podium. All seven wrestlers fought hard to go as far as they could. Senior Antonio Navarrette, Junior John Lopez, and Sophomore Keegan Wentz all ended the season bringing home hardware with 5th, 3rd, and 2nd place finishes, respectively. It is difficult to explain to someone who doesn't understand why anyone would ever put forth so much sacrifice and pain for six minutes on a foam mat. But for those who stand in front of their coaches with their arms raised; they understand.

The Salida Spartans are no match for the BVHS student section. This year, the Red Sea flooded the gym as both the girls and boys basketball teams dominated Salida.

Ernesto Venegas and Sabyn Diamond show their school spirit by dressing up as twins and channeling their inner hipster. (Above) Twin Day had the biggest turnout for the second spirit week at BVHS this year. Whether it was brooking up in their favorite team gear like Brook McFarland and Clay Aucoin, (Left) or keeping it classy in all black like Danielle Petri and Leah Cogan, (Top Left) each student was twinning with high hopes of victory for their beloved basketball teams.

red SEA.

During the second spirit week at BVHS, the themes were decided as Favorite Sports Team Day, Tacky Tourist Day, Twin Day, Ugly Sweater Day, and obviously Red and White Day. Our boys and girls basketball teams faced off with our rivals, the Spartans. The student body supported the Demon teams by showing up with the biggest and loudest student section all year. The student section ranged from kids who show up for every game to the ones who had never been to any. There was an immense amount of cheering, rallying, and excitement radiating throughout the gym. "I usually go to games so I can cheer on our teams, but there's something different about playing Salida, both the good and the bad come out in our crowd," says sophomore Becky Blitstein. Students stood up, creating a "Red Sea" with their Demon gear and watched the girls and boys teams walk away with two victories- 45-40 and 72-28.

eat sleep CHEER.

Hoots and hollers echo off the walls of the gym as the cheerleaders perform the routines that they have been practicing and perfecting over the past several months. With toes pointed and stunts tight, the winter and competition cheerleaders cheer their way into our hearts. This year, the Lady Demons competition cheer team took their talent all the way to the State Competition and finished 14th out of 27 total teams. Traditionally, the team showcases their State routine at the halftime of a Demon basketball game. This year proved to be no different as the perfectly choreographed dance wowed the crowd.

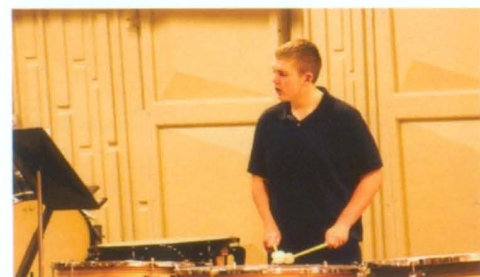

The BVHS Cheerleaders channel all of the energy and spirit of the crowd while keeping the students pumped up as they root for BVHS. Stunts are performed, pom poms shake, and the cheerleaders shout their cheers to the crowd, who shouts back. School spirit is felt all through the gym and the girls are able to cheer the Demons on to a win.

After months of practice and rehearsing, the high school band was finally ready to perform their winter concert. On the 9th of December, both high school and middle school band students met in the middle school gym and demonstrated their hard work to their friends and families. As the closing tune, the high school joined together with the middle school band to perform one song together.

Freshman Khyllie Trevillyan plays the clarinet in the band concert.

The choir concert took place the following night in the middle school gym. The students performed a variety of songs from different time periods as well as numerous different genres. The high school choir performed after the middle school students and then both choirs joined together on stage to do a final number together. Many students in both band and choir are able to express their love for music on a daily basis thanks to BVHS's splendid musical programs. The band and choir talents never cease to amaze the audience.

Above, Senior Claire Erickson and Junior Hannah Foreman prepare to sing at Western State Honor Choir. This All-State award is a tremendous accomplishment for both of these talented singers.

When the grass starts to turn green again and the snow starts to melt, yet the cold weather is there to stay for a couple more months, you know that it's time to slip on the shin guards, tie the track spikes, and grab the baseball bats. All the athletes hit the track, dirt, and field, ready to compete in whatever the spring weather has prepared. Athletes push through the practices when it's miserable and still feels like winter. Everyone looks forward to those spring days when the sun's rays warm their skin and the creek becomes an ice bath for all of the athletes after practice. Spring athletes are some of the toughest, from the shin splints from running too hard, and the bruises that come from wearing pitches, everyone pulls through the pain. This year, spring sports have a whole new meaning: play for someone other than yourself. Two of the spring sports lost two huge components of their teams. The track team lost one of their top hurdlers and runners, and also their amazing hurdling coach, Kiowa and Dawna Johnson. Kiowa was also a huge asset to the soccer team, she played forward and midfield. Kiowa and Dawna will be sorely missed by all spring sports players.

Yin and Rain

I'll always remember where I was when I found out.

I was at the library, and needed to take a break from my homework. I let my fingers slide across the screen as I unlocked my phone and looked down at the brightly colored apps. I tapped the Facebook app, and what I saw made my heart drop right through my chest. I stuffed my books into my bag and hurried out the door. My head was now light and uncomprehending. It couldn't be true. It couldn't be true. I thought that maybe if I thought it over and over, I could make myself believe it.

But when I got home, the somber looks from my parents and the blaringly loud news channel just served as confirmation. The bubble headed bleach blonde happily besieged our ears with what was to her just another news story. It meant nothing more than anything else she had to report. But it meant something to us. My gaze slid down, and I found myself staring blankly at the ornate, swirling patterns in the wood of the entertainment center. Rings that indicated the age of a tree, patterns that showed life cut short.

I got a phone call. A teary, shaky voice asked me where I was. I responded I was on my way over. I stood up and told my parents in a hollow voice that I was leaving, and I would be back. They told me that they wouldn't be far behind.

That was the first time in a while that I had cried. The music played softly over the radio, and coaxed the tears right out of me.

The air seemed physically heavy as I strode up to the school, friends gripping each other, crying, lamenting. Sadness seemed to permeate the air, like some thick cloud of smog.

Then a few of us football players began to stride towards the rugged rock. Just a couple at first, then more and more until we had all gathered in front of the massive stone. It was where victories were proclaimed with the acrid smell of spray paint, and the cool sense of purpose brought by the team. A car pulled up to shine its lights on the cragged surface of the boulder. The different shades of red and blue and white seemed to glow under the luminescent streams of light that cut through the darkness.

Wordlessly, soundlessly, we began to blanket the rock with a new coat. The scores were covered, and a new story was written. Silence ensued, replacing the hushed and husky conversations, as I could smell of the spray paint filling the air, hear the clinking of the ball in the can. More and more people found their way over and looked on as the rock underwent a transformation from a high school tradition to a true monument.

And it was then that I knew. Even in this vortex of depression and sadness, it became apparent that there was hope. A feeling so potent, that it warmed the soul from the inside in the midst of such a tragedy. We would persevere; we would march on, and we would never give in to the smothering darkness.

Although we often think of teachers as terrifying overlords with a pile of homework and pink slip in hand, teachers are the unsung heroes of high school. Each teacher brings a new lesson to the table at BVHS. Inside the classroom, these role models teach us the basis to education: math, science, geography, english, etc. Many teachers, though, have an effect on students that will last a life time.

Kindra Roberts

Kindra,

You are one of the strongest, most determined young women I know. As long as you rely on your beautiful, quiet spirit you can handle whatever life throws at you. There will always be family to support you, God to protect you and love to surround you! Wise words from Marilyn: "I believe that everything happens for a reason. People change so you can learn to let go. Things go wrong so that you appreciate them when you are right. You believe lies so you eventually learn to trust no one but yourself, and sometimes good things fall apart so better things can fall together." But most important, Jeremiah 29:11 "For I know the plans I have for you declares the Lord, Plans to prosper you not harm you, plans to give you hope and a future." In his hands you're safe.

Love, Your Family

Don't be naive about the future or, for that matter, today. Seek a career that you love, regardless of the pay. I want you to look forward to getting up every day with joy and end your day with a sense of fulfillment. Always stand up for yourself, strive to fulfill your goals but remember to cherish the simple things daily. Continue to bring laughter to those around you, it is a wonderful gift you have, share it with everyone and it will come back tenfold.

Evan Walters Evan Walters

Evan, you are loved beyond what words can describe! Your family will always be there for you and God will always be at your side. Make God, your family, and friends a priority. Laugh at yourself. Life is like a marathon; you need to work your way through it. Don't be in too big a hurry to get to the end of the race. Remember to stop along the way, look up and appreciate the beauty all around you. Take time to be thankful for the good and the bad in life. It's all there for a reason. We love you!
