"In a high school career, a Demon gets eight semesters, four bonfires, two after-prom hypnotist shows, and one hundred defining moments. A Demon has 241, 920 minutes; a small fraction of this will be spent in red and white for Friday night lights. It will be spent ringing the bell in front of the school as a sign of a Demon victory. It will be spent swimming in Cottonwood Creek for Biology class and playing poker with Skittles in Statistics. A Demon only gets 241, 920 minutes.

...but together, we've got THIS."

a new LEAF

August 25th, 7:00 am. Students are already up and dressed in their favorite back-to-school outfit. Seniors are sharing blankets and hot chocolate while sitting on the rickety, old bleachers at the fairgrounds, watching the sunrise. Soon, many of them will head to Rooster's Crow for an early breakfast with the class of 2017. The freshmen, who spent the previous day at the Noah's Ark Ropes Course, are eager to begin their first day as a Demon. Shea Moss, a freshmen, comments, "My first day of freshman year wasn't as bad as I thought it would be. I wasn't too nervous, but excited to be in high school."

Hayden Gibb

Whitney White and Emma Baroni

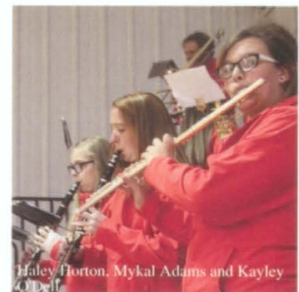

Prep challenges soon have everyone engaged, with students running through the halls in hopes of a victory. Whitney White, a senior, stated, "Prep challenges are a fun way to kick off the school year. I think they serve as a good icebreaker for new students and freshmen, as everyone has to work together and get to know each other to win challenges." That night, the gym fills with students rallying at the first volleyball home game. For many Fridays to follow, the bleachers towering over the football field will also be filled with excited students. Fall holds numerous enticing events for everyone. The golf team is almost midway through their season as the school year begins, well on their way to a league championship. The thespians soon choose their fall play, "The Diary of Anne Frank," and many actors are inducted into the first BVHS Theater Troupe. The band heartily prepares for music under the Friday night lights and perfect their rendition of the fight song. Cross country gears up, and two girls eventually arrive on the podium at their home competition.

Homecoming events are soon upon the student body. Powder Puff teams are assembled, royalty is elected, and parade planning is a topic of discussion for every activity.

The bonfire is another raging success, with students admiring the flames from a safe distance. Bystanders sip hot chocolate while the fire reflects off the students' sunglasses. All students eagerly await the football game, parade, and dance.

Fall is certainly buzzing with activity. Students' excitement carries over from the summer, bubbling through the school halls. Even during passing periods, one can hear conversations of eager Demons, chatting about the upcoming pep rally or the silly games played at the homecoming week assembly. Freshmen are just becoming immersed in BVHS culture, and seniors fill out college applications, knowing soon they will have to say goodbye to this community.

Lownet games, peach fuzz, and Halloween give the students new events to look forward to. Athletes soon fall into the swing of things with after school practices and long bus rides to events. Seniors order tassels, caps, and gowns to be used at the very end of their high school career. Textbooks are issued, varsity, JV, and C team jerseys are earned, new classes begin, and fall has begun.

on the line

starting off STRONG

Just before the first day of school, freshmen lined up outside the doors of the gym. Link crew leaders and faculty were busy inside, hanging up posters, streamers, and balloons to welcome in the class of 2020. They finished taping up the welcome banners and lined the doors to give each freshmen a high-five as they walked into the gym for freshmen orientation. To kick off the day, counselor Ms. Shane and principal Mr. Cope gave the freshmen a few words of advice for the coming years, including Ms. Shane leading the class in a pledge to walk across that same gym in four years and collect their diplomas. After a group back massage and a balloon-popping contest, the students split off into groups with their link leaders. The freshmen and link leaders then played icebreakers before loading onto buses to head to Noah's Ark Adventure Park. At Noah's, students strapped on their harnesses and helmets and headed off to conquer three different ropes courses: a vertical challenge, a leap of faith, and a drop swing. Some freshmen could be seen attempting to balance on the rope ladder in order to conquer the vertical challenge and ring the bell at the top. Other freshmen stood at the top of a wobbly telephone pole, preparing to jump off and grab a bar five feet away. Shrieks could be heard from the drop swing, where students swung out over the river. Freshmen McKenna Simpson stated, "Freshmen orientation was fun. I went on the giant swing, and it was fun for my first time there."

The next day, seniors lined up to watch the sunrise together, a long-standing tradition at BVHS. The school day began with the sound of the fight song echoing off the gym walls. Students were eager to introduce their teachers to the student body. The students flooded the gym floor when heading back to class, discussing new classes, new activities, and a new year. Freshman Tristyn Baker exclaimed, "Freshmen orientation was super fun. The best thing that happened was going on the swing because I bonded with my group and got out of my comfort zone. I'm glad I went to this so I could do something that's different."

-Matthew Linza

"The ropes course was a great experience. I have always had a fear of heights and by the end of the day I was laughing while doing the Leap of Faith."

-Meghan Anderson

"It was the biggest jungle gym that exists, which I've always loved. It was fun to compete with my friends. If it was a sport, I'd do it."

Powder Puff Football

Powder puff is tradition. Each year, one can hear tactics and team line-ups being discussed in the hallways long before the sign up sheets are released. Although the two teams are named the 'junior' and 'senior' team, girls from all grade levels can be seen running around the field on the Friday of homecoming week. Football players act as coaches and hold a practice or two before the girls hit the field. They map out strategies and direct their players on the field in hopes of a victory. Powder puff is the perfect balance between laughter and grit. The girls play to win, sprinting around the field, diving in the grass, and never losing the smile on their faces. Maggie Hollenbeck, a sophomore who played for the junior squad, professes, "Playing powder puff was a really cool experience. It was fun being able to plow through people and sack the quarterback. I can't wait until next year!" After the game ends, hot dogs and hamburgers were awaiting the players, coaches, and spectators on the sidelines. The students congregated together to talk about the best touchdowns and the toughest tackles. Powder puff may only be one of the many events to take place during homecoming week, but it unites all who come and provides lively entertainment for spectators and players alike.

It's not uncommon to see students dressed as lumberjacks, decked out in camo or tie dye, or sporting their favorite red outfit. More students participated in spirit week than almost ever before, as most Demons own a flannel for lumberjack day or some sweats for lazy day. The week concluded with a Demon display of spirit on red and white day and the halls were engulfed in a sea of red.

After a hard fought game of powder puff football, athletes, thespians, singers and artists all gathered under the lights of the football field for the annual pep rally. Each extra-curricular activity spoke about their season, goals, and accomplishments. Captain Annie Hughes, of the cross country team, praised the inclusive nature of her team. The golf team stepped into the spotlight when Mr. Baker announced them as league champions. The thespians expressed their enthusiasm for the upcoming play, The Diary of Anne Frank. The pep rally not only displays the numerous activities available at BVHS, but also the dedicated students and their passions.

Shut up & Dance

After a long day of football and parades, the students gathered in the middle school gym for the homecoming dance. Glowsticks lined the gym walls and covered the floors. The entire room was engulfed in fluorescent lights. The sound of high heels dancing on top of the speakers accompanied the DJs remixes. Before the dance, groups of students took pictures at the town lake or the tunnels just outside of town. Groups ate dinner at the Lariat or the Eddyline, sitting down to chat with their friends before heading to school. Many girls spent considerable time prior to homecoming, picking out the right dress with curly or straight hair to match. Boys combed through their hair and put on a tie. Even after the dance was over, groups of students piled in cars and headed off to spend the rest of the night watching movies or discussing the homecoming dance. For seniors, this was the last time to dance in the gym on homecoming night. For freshmen, this was the first invitation to enjoy the enticing events available throughout their high school career. The glow sticks covering the floor lit up Homecoming for all students dancing the night away.

Also, it was an awesome memory to share with Tyler, Dylan, Denver, Bobby and Brooke."

celebrating COMMUNITY

To an outsider, lining main street with hundreds of tables may seem strange. One might wonder why the football team took practice off to unload chairs in the streets in front of local businesses. But the answer is simple: this is how we celebrate community. We sit down to dinner.

For the third year in a row, thousands of townspeople flocked to main street to sit down and eat together. The volleyball team, cheerleaders, cross country team, and theatre troop served rolls and meat to the tables. In the center of town, everyone could be found talking and laughing with their friends and neighbors. A blue sky canopied over the entire event. Mr Fuller, who helped facilitate the event, stated, "The members of this community work hard and make sacrifices to live in this wonderful place. We extend a hand to help our neighbors in need as often as we can but once a year we all come together to celebrate this community. We hold hands and thank God for the many blessings we have here, and that extended hand is now passing the dinner rolls."

Nearly every school activity contributed to the community dinner in some way or another. Many groups assisted in helping set up chairs and tables or handed out food to the people. Tubs full of meat and rolls were handed off to each table. However, many people brought their own food as well. Each table seated eight people. Some were filled with families, some with friends, some with business partners. Whatever the combination, not a table at the dinner was without chatter.

FAMILY

After defeating Alamosa at home by one point in the Demons' season opener, the team knew that they would have to fight hard for every win. The senior players practiced from 3:30 to 6:00 everyday after school with one goal always on their mind: lead the team to victory, while everyone else worked hard and stayed focused along the way.

Despite multiple injury setbacks and switches in position, the boys pulled through and came out with a winning record of 6-4. By the end of the season, it wasn't the record that they will remember for years to come. The best memories will come from the team dinners before each game, the bus rides full of entertainment, playing alongside their brothers, and knowing that they were a part of something bigger than just a team. They were part of a family.

Sophomore Parker Johnson stepped up halfway through the season and lead the team as varsity quarterback. Johnson said, "Stepping up and being varsity quarterback was great; I loved the challenge it gave me and how I got to connect with the varsity players."

The JV also had a great season with a winning record of 5-3. Marshal Swarney, sophomore right guard and left tackle, said that his favorite part of the season was, "Hanging out with the guys before and after games." Along the same lines, Drew Martin added, "The highlight of my season was getting to practice everyday with the funniest group of guys I know. I will definitely miss the seniors."

Although the season ended sooner than desired, these brothers will remember their bond forever.

bringing our PASSION

Seven times this season, the Varsity volleyball girls suited up and ran out to “Space Jam” or “Smooth Criminal” in front of a roaring student section. The back right corner of the BVHS gym was so often a sea of red T-shirts, made up of students eager to catch candy being thrown by the volleyball team. But this excitement was found in many aspects of the volleyball season, aside from the jarring fun of game days. Freshman, Maddy Atha stated, “My favorite memory was when I blocked. Believe it or not I don’t block very often. You know, being five-foot and all.” Another freshmen, Tatem Hiltz, claimed, “I had this one game where I blocked the middle hitter like nine times.” Clearly, nothing gets the girls fired up during a game like a hard hit or block to set the team in motion.

The ten girls on C team, eleven JV players, and eight people suiting varsity enjoyed the games of Rusty’s during practice and playing Heads Up on the four-hour bus ride to Lamar. To kick off the season, the team hiked to Brown’s Creek Falls as their first alternative practice. Mid-way through the season, the team took a day off practice to watch Adams State University play Western State University in Alamosa.

Aside from volleyball, the team lightened the mood at practice with unique dance moves. Shelby Storms and Savannah Kite once performed an original dance to the song “Juju on that Beat” for the entire team after a game of Queens. Music played so often during warm-ups and group games that the team could not help but take advantage of that time to dance. Unfortunately, the varsity season ended sooner than they hoped when they lost to Bayfield at regionals. The bond between players, memories, fun alternative practices, and amazing victories will stand in the players’ memories long after they have forgotten their records and statistics.

no EXCUSES

A total of thirteen runners endured difficult training and rigorous runs in exchange for an excellent season and a bond amongst teammates. The team prepared for a multitude of changes. They switched from 3A to 2A and acquired a new coach. They went throughout the season. Little did the runners know, when the season began, the girl's team was well on their way to achieving fourth overall. Whitney White would place third and Annie Hughes would place second at state. Before anyone could stand on the podium however, the team first faced a barrage of practices and races. The team pasta dinners and a fun run known as 'the hash' helped to create unity throughout the team and added an element of joy to the season. Freshman Maddie Salazar was new to the high school team this year, and stated, "My favorite memory from the cross country season was when I ran at league and finally beat my best time. That was the moment when I realized that all the hard work and effort you put into running so hard everyday pays off." Cross country is not only a season of exciting memories, but also of competing against oneself to push just a little bit more, to run just a little bit faster, and to beat your personal record. But nothing can be achieved alone.

The memories the team made and the bonds that were formed added to the team's success. Anna Bearss, a sophomore, exclaimed, "Our team was really close this year. We had fun and made memories together whether we were running six miles in the rain and snow or at Spoon-It-Up eating yogurt together. We share the joy of pushing and training for something bigger than what we ever dreamed we would accomplish! We run for the hill of it."

"Knowing each beat and rhythm/ As you dance across the floor/ tumbling and twirling like an autumn leaf/ Wearing your confidence like a dress." —excerpt from Gymnastics Sentiment, a poem by Scout McMurry.

Few spectators leave a BV gymnastics meet without witnessing a stunning flip on the bars or a graceful dismount from the beam. Ten ladies awed the crowds at their two home meets and numerous away meets with their impressive back tucks with their impressive complex floor routines. The gymnasts not only worked to increase strength and master new techniques, but to get back on their feet each time they fell. This hard work did not go unnoticed, as three gymnasts, Berlin VanNess, Shyla Diamond, and Scout McMurry, performed at state. The successful season also united the team, strengthening their bond. Junior Bailey Stokes exclaimed, "The team worked well together and we were a family. The season was a lot of fun, and we did really well."

on your TRAIL

Although the short mountain biking season consists of only five races, surviving the season in one piece is no small feat. The team often sports new scrapes and bruises from the previous race. Each member surely has an intense story about crashing their bikes and eating the dirt. However, the food and tents full of people that crowd their races are surely a perk. Aron Fox, a junior, states, "My least worst race this year was at Granby. There was a lot of food and we only had to ride two laps instead of three." Despite the many challenges of mountain biking, the thrill of a downhill slope, showing off impressive scrapes, and free food at the races certainly allow for a thrilling season.

igniting SPIRIT

From the first day of school assembly to Friday night lights and the homecoming pep rally, the cheerleaders motivated the school by igniting Demon pride. Time and again, they hoisted each other up onto their shoulders to meet the crowd at eye level during the football games. It was no surprise to see T-shirts flying above you when standing in the student section during a home volleyball game, as all the cheerleaders were eager to throw prizes. With band accompaniment, they lead the crowd in many rounds of the fight song after a Demon touchdown.

The eight girls also facilitated games during prep of homecoming week. Students were required to put on a football helmet, do jumping jacks, run across a low balance beam, throw a football through a hoop, and other tasks. The cheerleaders helped prepare the students for the obstacle course and sparked excitement for the games during the assembly. In addition to firing up the student body during numerous events, the cheerleaders geared up for their league competition on November 17th, and all competitions to follow. Brooke Garrett, senior cheerleader, expressed, "It has been an exciting season where we accomplished many great things as a team."

just CLEAT IT

This year, three BVHS students dedicated an hour of their time each day to drive to Salida High School and play on their soccer team. The players included juniors Chance Vohs and Matthew Linza, and sophomore Levi DeWalt. Vohs and DeWalt were most often found on defense, and Linza played offense. The season was a success, with a final record of 13-4. They advanced to the second round of playoffs in post season and averaged three goals a game. Junior Matthew Linza claimed, "It was fun to go down to Salida and hang out and play with a bunch of cool cats. It's fun to make friends outside of BV. Most of us were really close. One of my favorite memories is the bus ride back after we came back during a game from three goals down and won. We were doing a bunch of chants and getting rowdy." While the drive to Salida may have been long or mundane, meeting new people and having the opportunity to play soccer through the fall surely outweighed the extra time commitment. Levi DeWalt, a sophomore, professed, "I enjoyed going undefeated on JV and moving up to start three games of Varsity."

we are VALUABLE

To follow last year's fall play, Fools, a comedy about a town plagued with stupidity, the thespians took an entire new twist with their fall play: The Diary of Anne Frank. When spectators first entered the gym, they were given a pledge card reading, "How will you choose to help people know they are infinitely valuable?" To follow, a huge timeline awaited them. It detailed the events in World War 2 that pushed Anne Frank and so many other Jewish people into hiding. Just outside the gym, slideshows were presented about current incidents of genocide. The fall play was not the light-hearted comedy it so often is. Rather, it conveyed many important messages on the human condition.

The play was staged entirely in a secret annex. Anne Frank, played by sophomore Mimi Riley, flounced around the set, often writing in her diary, flirting with Peter van Daan (played by junior Kyran Stoumbaugh), or fighting with her mother, Edith Frank (played by senior Hayden Gibb). The play depicted the hopes and horrors of the people hidden in the annex. After many brutal months, the Jews in hiding delighted in the thought of being liberated. Nazis (played by senior Dylan Jewell, freshman Tim Sullivan, sophomores Matthew Thompson and Shiloh Marine) stormed the building, pushing the hidden families out of the annex.

As difficult as it was to act out the horrors of the Holocaust, the play brought to light the importance of taking action and united the cast. Mimi Riley, who played Anne Frank, stated, "The play was a really cool experience. It not only told a deeply personal and moving story, but it also brought the entire cast together." The sense of community built during long hours of rehearsal does not go unnoticed. Hayden Gibb, who played Edith Frank, claimed, "My favorite thing about performing and being part of the performing arts department at BV is always the family you build with your cast and crew members. You're a family not only on stage but offstage as well. We always support each other and I have never felt a greater sense of community than when I am with my cast."

If one were to visit BVHS on any given school day, there is no telling what might be seen. Students may be outside playing ping-pong with Ms. Williams, or perhaps analyzing the soil in the nature trail with Mr. Keidel. Ms. Naegele's Anatomy class could be seen dissecting cow hearts or sheep eyeballs. The choir room would be filled with a multitude of voices to accompany the artists that work on their paintings just across the hall. From the shops building, sparks light up the room as students work to perfect their welding skills. With a few new classes this year, including AP Spanish, AP U.S. History, and Coding, every student is sure to find at least one course that resonates with them. Cooper Armstrong, a senior, stated, "Choir is really the place in school where I can sing as myself and feel comfortable doing so. We learn, at least for me, practical things that will help in life. I'm going to use the skills I learn in choir for all of my life, and Tanner Oharah is the best at teaching those skills. Truly amazing class and really amazing teacher." On a similar note, Mimi Riley, a sophomore, exclaimed, "Drama is really fun. One morning, Mr. Oharah hid a piece of paper with a bomb drawn on it and we had to find it silently before it 'went off'. We all died." BVHS academics are providing a unique opportunity for students to explore their interests.

the hassle of extra studying. Basketball games and wrestling meets take the place of volleyball games and home cross-country meets. The bleachers are once again filled with eager students chanting and singing the fight song.

After Winter break passes, the students are instantly met with a snow day the first Friday of the semester. Brily Pence claimed, "For my snow day, a bunch of people went up to the rodeo grounds and went sledding. A lot of other people also went up to cottonwood to sled." Gracie Johnson confessed, "I just stayed home, sat by the fire, and drank some herbal tea. I cuddled up in a fuzzy blanket and watched Vampire Diaries on Netflix." The snow day allowed students a chance to relax or enjoy the winter activities available in Colorado.

The mountains towering over BV provide numerous activities for students to enjoy. Whitney White, a senior and a member of the cross country ski team in Leadville, exclaimed, "It's nice to live in a place where we can go skiing and enjoy the winter and the beauty of winter." Skiing, snowboarding, sledding, as well as other activities, are in full swing during the winter season. Days spent shredding the snow at Monarch Mountain or ice fishing at Cottonwood Lake fill up weekend agendas.

In addition to the many after school activities winter has to offer, the season also ushers in a time for One Act Plays, for the beginnings of a Chess Club, and numerous other activities. Winter also provides the opportunity to stay inside rather than bear the cold. Erin Ortiz declares, "My favorite part of winter is that I can watch Netflix all day without feeling guilty about not going outside."

From skiing down the slopes, walking to art class in the snow, or staying in and watching Netflix during the cold months, winter in Buena Vista ushers in a unique time of year. The basketball games, snow days, and holiday decorations and festivities create a cozy atmosphere even in the humdrum of February.

From their strong presence during a home meet against our rivals, to their feet pounding on the gym floor as they lead cheers, the cheerleaders add a new dimension to school spirit. This year, eight girls committed to bringing the red sea alive as part of the winter cheer team. In addition, six of these girls participated in competition cheer. Sidney Garcia, a junior participating in both competition and winter cheer, remarked, "Everyone was a supportive family and they were always there. I'm just proud to call them my cheer family." The tight bond shared by these girls shined through at competitions and as they led the student section during home games.

Addison Harmon & Shelby Phillips

From perfecting their tumbling to adding new cheers to the line-up, the cheerleaders consistently brought a new aspect of excitement to the gym on game day. Coach MaryKate Coleman said, "It has been fun to watch the program continue to grow over another year. Sarah and I are so proud of the girls and all of the work they have put in to making this year so fun and successful!"

One Acts

With the drama room dressed in black curtains, a make-shift, black box theater came to life. The night began with a murderous tale, bringing into question which guest at a hotel possessed a dark past. After the murderer was discovered, the lights illuminated the theater and the actors served a light dinner to the audience. To follow, the students performed a series of monologues, showcasing the ability of a single person to bring a stage to life.

A second, far sillier, one-act play then commenced, in which TV show hosts Mimi Riley and Dylan Taylor-Brunell attempted to retell famous fairy tales. Drama students appeared dressed as trolls and witches, wearing orange beards or a mop for a wig. The audience was even asked to participate often by the two TV show hosts. The One-Act plays mystified the audience, enchanted them with monologues, and brought the Grimms' Fairy Tales to life with big laughs, all within the walls of a little black box theater.

#BVLove

The whole school was full of love on Valentine's Day. The Choir performed singing valigrams while the drama department handed out roses and hilarious Shakespeare valentines. The school was a sea of red with many students wearing their t-shirts from StuCo that read #BVLove. The shirts were made in honor of the special day and the basketball games that were played against Salida that same evening.

Smiles filled classrooms as couples exchanged gifts, and the single people looked forward to chocolate being on clearance the following day. Although the day eventually had to come to an end, the love in BV never failed to surround each and every student.

hittin' the Clubs

With all the activities to get involved in at BVHS, it's no surprise Demons fill their days with numerous undertakings. From Thursday-night Chess Club events to Interact Club meetings, the days are packed with activities available to students. Student Council took on yet another year of Toys for Tots and hand-delivered numerous Christmas presents to families. Hali Hysjulien says, "Our community has done so much for Student Council. I love doing Toys for Tots because I get to give back to the community." The many blue recycling bins around the school are credited to Interact Club. Interact brings students together to better the school as well as the town.

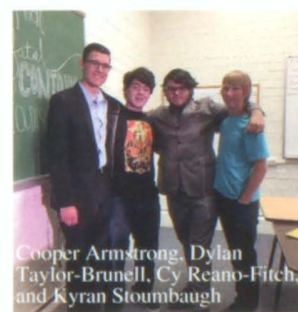

For many students, clubs are a way to follow their passion or explore a career path. The Thespian Troupe, new to BVHS, is an honor society for students who have completed at least 100 hours of theater work. Cy Reano-Fitch, Thespian President, exclaimed, "Being nominated as the first president of BVHS's Thespian Troupe is such a huge honor. For all of us, theater means a lot more than just an extra-curricular activity. Theater is a way to express ourselves and grow as young adults. The troupe enables us to advocate for the arts in our community." Many thespians attend Thescon each year, a theater competition and event where these thespians become versed in their love of acting. The drama class performs One-Act plays and gives students a chance to showcase their diverse talents which is their final at the end of the semester.

Trident Theater Company includes everyone, students and adults, actors and tech crew, contributing to the fall play and spring musical.

Many other groups join clubs to boost their abilities. DECA traveled to the Broadmoor for a competition meant to prepare students for business and leadership roles. NAHS, National Arts Honor Society, also allows students to display their talents. On Valentine's Day, the NAHS students held a fundraiser in which community members could pick up a handmade bowl and fill it up with hot soup. NHS, National Honor Society, holds blood drives, hosts a dance, and runs a game night. Chess club sharpens students' skills around the chess board. Players work on strategy and compete against other students during chess club meetings every Thursday. The diverse number of clubs and organizations offered to students ensure everyone can find something to fill their free time and develop a collaborative mindset.

TUNING IN

The band program had a diverse group of students. Their many different styles made this year's band unique and memorable. The joyful winter and spring concerts were the result of many rehearsals, and along the way many funny memories were made; this year was one to remember.

Gabriella Wagner stated, about second year band teacher Mrs. Bott, "She's a good teacher and a nice lady."

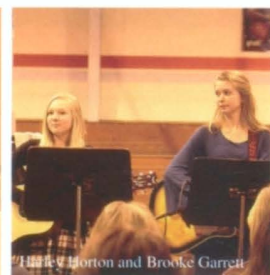

The BVHS band is a great program that bands after year. From the seniors who have been in band for six years, to the freshmen apprentices, each student makes the band unique and sounding like none other.

In addition to the mesmerizing concerts and the many practices leading up to them, the band can also be spotted in the bleachers at nearly every home game. They lead the school in the fight song, national anthem, and set the tone for the whole event with numerous musical numbers.

In addition to concert band, jazz band and guitar class are also offered to BVHS musicians. Each class contributes to the beauty of the program and helps to perfect the final product. The two annual concerts are a way to show their hard work. Their lively music doesn't only keep the crowd going during athletic events, but also captivates the audiences at each concert.

This year, choir sang to a different beat and literally mixed it up. As opposed to past years, when choir was a combined elective of all males and females, grades 9-12, the 2016-2017 choir began a new tradition. Now students are allowed to enroll in Men's Choir, Women's Choir, or audition for a spot in Mixed Choir. "Choir this year was cool; it allowed for individualization and really focused on musicality," says Senior Hayden Gibb. Freshman Aidan Mattson, who is also a member of Mixed Choir, said, "I really like it. It's a lot more fun, the people in the class are a lot more interested, and it's cool to hear the different parts combined." This year Mr. Oharah decided on music with a theme of love and war to perform in the fall and spring showcases. "I see a lot of growth this year; the new groups are a good opportunity for new elements to be introduced through men's and women's choir. We can build off of each other," says Junior Cy Reano-Fitch.

Academics

While not all classes at BVHS resonate with each and every student, every student has a class, teacher, or project they are eager to rave about. From perfecting a project in wood shop to learning history with Mr. Reed and Mr. Reavis, everyone is sure to find something within the BVHS that sparks their interest. Autumn Johnson, senior, details, "The shops program is more than just an easy credit to certain people who love to work with their hands. It can be a path to showing someone who doesn't think they will find a career that they can find a career in woodworking, welding, or machinery." Through programs such as shops, students often discover a passion that leads them to possibilities they hadn't even considered before. In addition to learning about different subjects, many students discover how they learn best. While some enjoy hands-on learning, others value listening to a lecture or working with friends to complete an assignment. Cailee Rodman, a freshman, states, "I struggle with learning something without actually practicing it. My friends and I do our work together and that makes it easier." BVHS students discover their own capabilities, joy, and challenges everyday.

Hitting the Books

A day rarely passes at BVHS in which something of interest doesn't come about for Demon students. With the new 7- period schedule, students jump from class to class, learning a wide variety of subjects throughout the day. Often, when studying, students explore subjects they never sought to learn before. Toby Camp, in a reflection on a Senior English Independent Writing Assignment, said, "I learned that, if we have a choice in what we write, I can write well. I also learned that I write too much about hunting and can be a good writer if I try, but it was a really fun writing assignment." By incorporating students' passions into tasks like writing essays, the student's enjoyment for schoolwork increases tenfold. Becca Wingo says, "I like global studies because we laughed at a funny joke Mr. Reed said and got off track." The unique classes and experiences, not to mention the mix of characters and talents, at BVHS bring a different dynamic to each day.

A new season allows for a new team to take the court by storm, and that's exactly what the boy's basketball team did. With a varsity roster filled with veterans and players who just earned the privilege of wearing a varsity jersey, the team had a chance to awe loyal fans.

During the infamous rival game, the bleachers filled with a sea of red. The crowd was prepared with a new tactic for cheering. The "Silent-til-Six" plan involved the crowd remaining silent until the boys scored six points. At the very start, the Demons were down by a few points, and the crowd waited eagerly for the number six to appear on their side of the score board. The team hit their sixth point with a lay-up from Jordan Yates. The crowd erupted with applause then went crazy when Cade Carroll took the ball down on a fast break and dunked it immediately afterward. The team went on to win the game as the red sea continued to rattle the gym.

Through teamwork and diligence, the boys secured third at Districts, a feat rarely accomplished at BVHS. This title, however, was hard won. The varsity boys were battling for third. The score was close through the first three quarters, and it was in the fourth quarter when they decided to kick it into high gear. Their faces revealed both exhaustion and determination as the time kept ticking down. Dillon Tanner came around the outside and received a pass from Cade Carroll. The teammates on the bench fell quiet, clenched their fists, and hoped the ball would fall through the net. Dillon Tanner said, "I cleared my mind. I wasn't thinking about anything. I got the ball, and I took the shot." As the time on the clock slowly fell down to zero, the crowd erupted with excitement. Dillon Tanner hit the shot, securing the title for the team. Smiles spread across the faces of the team as they came off the court laughing and high-fiving. Riley Chupp, a junior, reflects back on the game, "It was fun to play as a team and beat a team that beat us earlier in the season." The victory that the team strived for was finally in their grasp. The bench, coaches, and the crowd were incredibly happy to watch their team walk off the court with another victory and another chance to play yet another week of the game they love.

order on the COURT

It always starts with a jump ball. The five starters line the court, awaiting the clock on the wall to lurch into a count down. The whistle is blown, the ball is hurled into the air by the ref, and two opponents reach up to snag it with their fingertips. Whether it be C-Team, JV, or a Varsity game, Lady Demon Basketball games are packed with exciting plays and fresh moves. However, it is often what happens off the court, away from the crowds and the cheering fans, that truly makes the BVHS girls basketball team exceptional. The long bus rides, the after-school grind at practice each day, and the time spent just shooting around are the unseen pieces of the season that drive the team when they're on the court.

The leadership and positive team dynamic exists at all levels of the basketball program. C-Team, JV and Varsity all contribute to a constructive varsity in order to better the individual as well as the program. Freshmen experience a new twist on a basketball season that differs from their prior experiences.

Freshman Shea Moss stated, "I really enjoyed this year's basketball season because it was more intense than middle school basketball." Sophomores and juniors returning to the program know what to expect and how to build their talents on the court. Shelby Storms, a sophomore, exclaimed, "This basketball season was a great experience. We grew in talent and also in faith. We played together this year and it affected the way we played for the better. I can't wait for next year to be able to continue to grow and learn together as a team." For seniors, though, the last season on the girls basketball team marks a special rite of passage for players that have dedicated so much time to the program. Arden Bardol, a senior, remarked, "I'm really proud of the team that we grew into over the course of the season. I felt really honored that I was the only senior and got to experience that role with so much support from the team. It was a great last season."

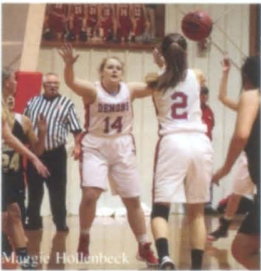

The girl's basketball team is more than a record or a number on the scoreboard. Their successful season, in which they advanced into the playoffs, was built on the back of a positive team culture. For veteran players, the muscle memory of a jump shot comes as easily as creating a team that feels like a family. The memories created on and off the court will last long after the numbers on the wall have faded.

pulling your WEIGHT

The season started out great with 18 total wrestlers joining the team. Showing up at 6:00 am to run laps in the gym, cutting back on their favorite foods to make weight, and intense after school practices did nothing to drain the spirit of this year's wrestling team. Every hour, minute, and second of their hard work was aimed towards the same goal: make state at the Pepsi Center. This year, three of our wrestlers, senior Denver Hargrove, senior Cameron Wolters, and freshman Owen Berry, competed at State Wrestling. "I'm really proud that I made it to State, and I'm hoping to get better and make it next year too," says Owen Berry.

But for some, such as Dylan Jewel, the 2017 season was their last chance to make a mark on the mat. "It's sad to know that I'll never step on the mat again, but I will forever be grateful for all the lessons that Coach Todd and Coach Drawbridge have taught me in my four years, and I know I'll be a better man because of it." Along with Jewel, the other 6 seniors on the team worked hard to make it a great year. Although giving it their best did not result in a place at State for everyone, the seniors left it all out on the mat and encouraged the rest of their teammates. The 2016- 2017 wrestling season will not be defined by the amount of victories on the record, but instead by the bonds created, on and off the mat.

PEPSI CENTER PINS

From Rock Hard Wrestling, starting at three years old, to finally arriving at BVHS, there is one end goal in mind for Demon wrestlers: a trip to "The Can." This year, five wrestlers persevered through the grit and grind of wrestling to finish their season at the Pepsi Center. Two seniors, Denver Hargrove and Cameron Wolters, entered the state tournament knowing their final high school matches would take place on those mats. The wrestlers' hard work did not go without reward. Cameron Wolters and Owen Berry both placed fourth, and Anthony Quintana placed 5th. Cameron Wolters stated, "It was a tough and painful journey but it was worth every minute." The final minutes of the season at the Pepsi Center proved the victorious moments of wrestling far outweigh the hardships faced.

dirt tracks & BASEBALL BATS

With the melting of the snowy peaks, comes track and field and baseball season. Running until your lungs burst and swinging until you hit a home-run aren't the only things that go into a typical day on the dirt. This year the track and field team recruited 50 athletes. "It's nice to be able to run and get tan," says senior Dylan Jewell. Although track isn't all about fun in the sun, the intense workouts require serious dedication. Practice everyday after school and meets almost every weekend are typical in a trackster's schedule. Running, throwing, and jumping are the focus of these athletes if they want to out-run, out-jump, or out-throw the competition.

For others who prefer a sport of a different speed, baseball is offered as well. Along with hitting the batting cages and braving the harsh Colorado weather, the players must work together in order to play as a team. "It's a mental game, it's more than just physical. You have to block everything out but the game, and just be cool," says Senior Cameron Gordanier. Every person must individually and improve in order for the team as a whole to win. But for the players, working as a team is just plain fun. Sophomore Glen Dwyer remarks, "Practice is enjoyable because it's nice to play with a team. I really enjoy bonding with the team."

Kickin' It

The first signs of spring signal that it's time to lace up those cleats and hit the field. To accompany a new coach, the team also has a brand new attitude to start off the season. Twenty-nine girls have joined the soccer team. Lilli Shultz remarks, "The girls on the team are all super encouraging and supportive of everyone which has made the season really fun so far."

With a little hard work and commitment, these girls are fired up and ready to take the season by storm. While soccer is a competitive sport, the fun and silly nature of the players this season make the sport both intense and enjoyable.

imagine all the PEOPLE

If there is anything that sets BVHS apart, it is the people. There is never a person who can be solely categorized as a jock or a geek, since the diverse interests of students is practically a requirement to be a Demon. Before the school bell chimes in the morning, signaling the start of another school day, students fill the parking lot, blasting music from their car speakers and talking with friends as the Colorado sun heats up the pavement. The halls are also filled with their friends talking, discussing a recent sporting event, or getting help with homework from a peer. These groups are soon dispersed by the first-hour bell, and students are off to their classes. Even in the earliest hours of the day, when students are still waiting for their morning coffee from The

Tori Landon

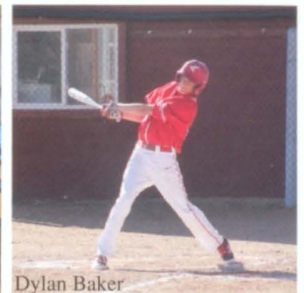

Roastery to kick in, classrooms are animated and lively. Freshmen can be found in Mrs. Limoncelli's science class, working on an infamous scratch-off test, or in Mr. Reavis' Global Studies class, making memes to study language. Sophomores might be working tirelessly on their Algebra 2 STEM homework or creating a poster to highlight the plot of Wuthering Heights. If caught in early spring, the junior will surely be outlining their ideas for the paper. After a long morning of working on math homework or perfecting a bowl for ceramics, the students all pile in cars and truck beds and head off to lunch. Demons are frequent fliers at Loaf N' Jug and Subway, where students take a quick break from school before heading back. After the last three classes of the day have also passed, the parking lot is once again accompanied by the pitter-patter of converse and sneakers as the school is emptied. The football field, dirt track, or gymnasium are nearly always flooded with players working to perfect their jump shot or better their passes. Some students head off to meetings for clubs and organizations, such as battling it out over a chess board at chess club or wrapping Toys for Tots presents for Student Council. The numerous events and activities happening on campus allow for a student body of diverse interests and passions.

While the mundane part of high school often seems endless in the cold months of February or during a tough academic week, Demons persevere by finding what makes them tick. Often, it is not one thing alone that makes up a Demon, but rather many different hobbies and skills. In this small, tight-knit community, it is nearly impossible to not find something enjoyable during the four years at Buena Vista High School.

Now that you have reached the closing of a chapter in your life, we can reflect on all the shared times in laughter, pain, sorrow, struggles, craziness and love. All of those moments shared and time spent together has helped in shaping you into the young man before us now. This young man you have become makes us proud and honored to call you our son, brother and friend. As you embark on the next chapter in life we want you to know that we are excited to see what you achieve and will be there for you in times you struggle or fail. See, in life, failure is only a building block for success. Joe, as you move forward into adulthood we will always be there for you, support you and love you with all our hearts!

Buggy, as you start this new journey, always remember: never stop being who you are, never lose sight of who you are and what you believe, to please others. Always stay true to yourself. Keep your eyes on your goals. If you ever feel afraid for whatever reason, hold your head high and say, "I can do this," smile and move forward with confidence. I pray that you will continue to become all that God has made you to be. Take on your future with confidence and strength. Always remember I will be there to lend a hand, an ear to listen or a shoulder to cry on. I am very proud of you. I love you to the moon and back. "Stay strong!"

Don't expect a free ride from no one. Don't hold a grudge or a chip and here's why: bitterness keeps you from flyin. Don't steal, don't cheat, and don't lie. I know you got mountains to climb. When the work you put in is realized, let yourself feel the pride. Always stay humble and kind.-Tim McGraw

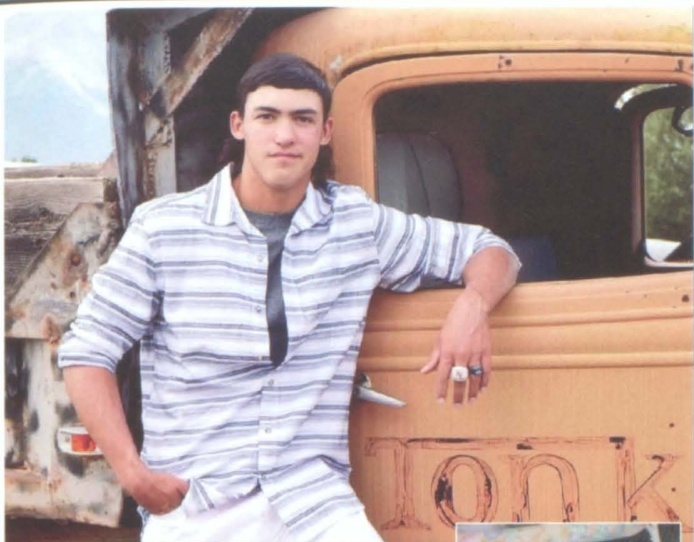

You will always be our little boy. We love you and are so proud of you! Dad, Mom, Caitlyn and Ashley Dream Big! You have everything it takes to be & do amazing things. Watching you grow up has been such an adventure already! We can only imagine what is ahead for you! Take pride in all you do, treat people with kindness and respect and you will go far. We are so very proud of you and looking forward to the next chapter!

Love you!

To our Annie!
We couldn't be happier for you to be able to spend your senior year in our family's favorite town, Buena Vista! After a fun week at family camp, we were inspired to make the mountains our home, and actually, you led the way. If you hadn't been willing to move during your senior year, we wouldn't have put the wheels in motion as soon either. It's been wonderful to share in your high school experience in Wisconsin and Colorado. The best part for us, as your parents, is witnessing your growth and maturity into a lovely young woman. I remember when you were a very little girl, it was important to me that you understand what it meant to be "pretty on the inside" by expressing God's qualities. You have exceeded our expectations! Your character, which is defined by kindness, honesty, morality, acceptance/inclusiveness of others, independence, intelligence, tenacity, resourcefulness, and resiliency, has served you well, and will continue to do so in your college career. Never forget how much you are loved and respected by us, Snooks! xoxox Mom and DD p.s. Can't wait to watch you run in college! GO ANNIE!

Mirei, allow us to inspire you with some words of advice, that's part of our job as parents. Remember that the older you get, the smarter we get. Life is short, smile while you still have teeth.

From the baby girl with the enormous temper, to the little girl who loved her miniature horse, and now the young woman who dreams of being an actress, it's been fun watching you succeed, and during the times that you didn't, it was an honor to be able to help pick you up and watch you continue on. We know that there's nothing that you won't be able to achieve. You will always have our full support and love. Mirei, our family was strengthened the day you were born. You brought new life and new hope to all of us.

When you finally go off to start your life, always know that no matter how far away you may be from us, we will always be here for you to come home to. And don't forget to dream of a better world, a world where chickens can cross the road without having their motives questioned.

now: listen to the sages, proud and humble. To start, here's a poem:

Finish every day and be done with it
You have done what you could
Some blunders and absurdities no doubt have crept in;
forget them as soon as you can.
Tomorrow is a new day;
begin it well and serenely,
And with too high a spirit to be lumbered with your old nonsense

This day is all that is good and fair
it is too dear,
with its hopes and invitations to waste a moment on yesterdays

small town BIG HEARTS

Long before the class of 2017, 18, 19, or 20, set foot in BVHS, and long after each of these classes leave, the teachers at this school and the core values by which they teach will remain steadfast. While some teachers have laid down roots at Buena Vista High School for decades, others only recently joined the community of educators. Yet, each of them strives to educate the students that sit before them year after year. However, the styles by which these teachers teach, differs from classroom to classroom. In Mrs. Johnson's Language Arts Three class, discussions about Indian folk lore and Edgar Allan Poe are so often vibrating throughout the room. Ancient Greece is alive in Mr. Fritsch's English classes, as the sophomores and AP Literature and Composition students delve into Oedipus the King, and other plays written by Sophocles. Just across the hall, it is not uncommon to find a student screaming

"Down with the Montagues!" as the freshmen reenact Romeo and Juliet. Although there is little of Greece and Shakespeare in the science hallway, there is certainly more unusual sights. Each year, Mrs.

Naegele's anatomy class digs into pig carcasses, sheep eyeballs, and cow hearts to discover more about the inner workings of living things. Mrs. Limoncelli's Physical Science class is often racing orange cars on a track to study the laws of motion. If one were to find themselves in Mr. Keidel's classroom, a collection of insects could be assembled during Ecology. However, this craft may be

As the end of the school year draws near, and the freshly cut grass replaces the icy ground, most students prepare to take on another summer in this adventurous location just off the Arkansas River. But the school year didn't go by unnoticed. While some seniors are counting the days until they can walk up and get their diploma, others are reminiscing the four years at BVHS. The days in which the lights of the field could be seen illuminating the town on Friday Nights or a jam-packed parking lot was a sure sign of homecoming. The scenes of students hidden in a secret annex from the fall play, The Diary of Anne Frank, are still vivid in everyone's memory. The chanting of a red sea bouncing off the walls of the gym during a volleyball game never failed to bring a Demon victory. Although classes may seem long during the winter months, students may leave this school having the experience of shocking fish in Cottonwood Creek with Mr. Keidel, holding fire in Mrs. Naegele's Chemistry class, or hunting down clues in a history scavenger hunt with Mr. Reavis. It is not, however, the eccentric experiments nor the excitement of a home basketball game that makes BVHS special. It is the people. It is the melting pot of athletes and mathletes and the numerous perspectives all housed in the little piece of Colorado that is BVHS.
