Welcome Class of 2019

Meet the 2015 peer coordinators,
Anthony Perfidio and Gabryel Oloapu.

While most of campus was off on vacation, these two dedicated students spent their summer planning freshmen orientation to ensure a memorable first impression of Wagner.

For an interview with them, turn to Page 2.

A message from the oval office

Dear new and returning students,

On behalf of the Student Government Association (SGA), I would like to welcome the incoming students to our campus community. The campus has been working hard for your arrival and we cannot wait to see just what the Class of 2019 has to offer.

My name is Dillon Quinn and I am the student body president for the 2015-2016 school year. I am a junior from Minneapolis majoring in business administration, minoring in government and politics. My main passions within the SGA are ensuring transparency with the student activity fee, ensuring that the student voice is heard in all decisions being made on campus and advocating for Wagner students in our community.

To provide some insight, the SGA is the official representation of the college for student or group concerns. By working with students, faculty and administration, the SGA works to improve our lives on campus while promoting cultural tolerance, awareness and participation. The SGA is also the governance structure that oversees all clubs and organizations on the campus. We also ensure that the Wagner student voice is heard on the local, regional and national levels related to student-centered issues.

The SGA is comprised of an executive board as well as a student senate with five student senators from each class. Four are elected through a majority vote and one is appointed by the four elected senators. As a member of the Wagner College SGA, their primary responsibility is to act as a liaison between the members of their class, the administration of the college and the SGA by drafting legislation to bring new ideas and changes to campus. If you are interested in joining, applications are due on Sept. 9 at 4:30 p.m. and can be found on the SGA website at wagner.edu/sga.

The SGA spent time this summer making changes to our internal structure, while expanding our roles as student leaders to see how we can address the major social issues affecting our peers. We have revamped the budgeting process that clubs and organizations go through to receive funding. We have also created new committees that will address complaints, social initiatives, Wagner dining and governmental relations. Be on the lookout for information about the "It's On Us" initiative expanding its reach further on campus this semester. Additionally, we will be working hard to ensure proper mental health services are available for all students while working to end the stigma about seeking treatment for mental health concerns. As always, the SGA will remain dedicated to addressing the needs and concerns of our peers as they are brought to our attention.

I encourage all students to get involved in clubs and organizations. Try new things! There is so much that is offered on this campus and taking part in it will make your experience here much more valuable.

I look forward to meeting you all this year and cannot wait to work together to make Wagner an even better place than it already is. The SGA office is located in the Union, near the entrance to the dining hall.

Dillon Quinn
SGA President

Wagner's 'local celebrities'

Co-Editors Rea Ulaj and Ariana Palmieri met with the freshmen orientation Peer Coordinators Gabryel Oloapu and Anthony Perfidio for an insights into what the job entails.

Wagnerian: How did you decide to become a coordinator?

Gabryel: Curtis approached me at the beginning of the year and asked me to be a part of it. He was looking to make it a little bit diverse and he thought that I could offer that.

Anthony: As soon as sophomore year began, I became a peer leader. I did it for two years and then I wanted to take more of an active role. Being here for three months has definitely shifted my perspective on orientation and Wagner as a whole.

W: What's been your biggest challenge?

G: I think this year it was different because I know in the past, peer coordinators always had someone older mentoring them and working in this office. For me and Anthony, it was just us most of the summer. I was like, "Anthony how does this work," because I had not done it before.

A: Something that's difficult for every peer coordinator is communicating with all the peer leaders that are away for the summer. It's a lot of people to talk to, and during the summer not a lot of people want to think about school. They want to enjoy their summer.

W: What are your duties?

G: We plan the late-night events, talk to companies and get contracts. That takes a while because you're talking to so many different companies that are offering the same thing. One of the biggest events to plan was Casino night. We also plan peer leader training.

A: We have to find a balance where we make the most of orientation and training. I know one year, at least from my perspective, training was less emphasized, as opposed to planning orientation. Then the next year we had a much stronger emphasis on training, but communication started breaking away during orientation and people got a little bit frustrated. One of the things that is strictly on my mind is to make sure both are treated equally.

W: What does training entail?

G: We didn't get trained. We were kind of just given a task list to complete.

A: In terms of peer training we have to update them on new policies and how move in and orientation is going to go this year. We make sure they incorporate ice breakers so they get to know their LC students better.

Senior Anthony Perfidio sorts flyers and pamphlets into the welcome folders.

We are going to cover everything they need to know in just three days.

W: How do you benefit from this position?

G: Organizing and event coordinating is quite useful. To be able to say on my resume I was an orientation coordinator and that I organized events for 400 to 500 people is not something every college student can say they've done.

A: Other than the spot on the resume, I think it helps us while we are still here at Wagner. It makes us stand out more than the general public. Our name is known in almost every department in this school.

W: Why do you think peer leading is important?

G: I think this position is important because it is the freshmen's first point of contact with the college. When they arrive on campus, this is what they are going to see. It is important for them to see the college in a good light from the very beginning. Peer leading is important because freshmen need to be able to see people that are excelling in the college, so they can aspire to be like them.

A: I think it's certainly beneficial to have a group of people that know the answers to all the questions the freshmen are going to have. We also have social media groups that make sure freshmen have all their information right.

W: What is a fun fact about yourself?

G: I play acoustic guitar. People always think that just because I'm an athlete, I don't have another side to me.

A: I wasn't even going to apply to Wagner. I actually put my application in the day before the final deadline. I'm very glad that I did that. I never thought I'd be an orientation coordinator.

W: What do you love most about your position?

A: Being able to be that constant contact for freshmen. Sometimes peer leaders seem like local celebrities walking around campus.

W: Any advice for people who want your position?

A: Be prepared for a long summer, a few stressful moments and for it to just fly by. It feels like it was just June.

G: Be involved and step out of your comfort zone. There are a lot of ways to be active.

W: Any advice for freshmen?

A: There's two ways to go about your stay at Wagner: you can either stay in your room all day and shut yourself in, or you can step out of your comfort zone and find some clubs you're interested in.

W: What do you love most about Wagner?

G: For me it's New York. I come from New Zealand which is more relaxed. I also like that Wagner has small classes and that I can have relationships with my professors that you wouldn't get at a big school.

A: It feels like I'm in a different place. I was born and raised here and I don't even feel like I'm on the island while on campus.

It has given me a different perspective on this place I've called home my entire life. I recently became a resident last year and doing that gave me the opportunity to meet people from all over the world.

There’s an app for that!

In this new age of technology, there are phone applications for everything. There’s less risk of getting lost in the city or picking the wrong restaurant. Here are a few apps that have proved to be handy to Wagner students.

Wagner mobile

You go to the school, so you should probably get it. This app gives you access to both the Daily Bulletin and the shuttle schedule. It also allows you to contact public safety. It has all the things that you will definitely need in your first semester here.

Embark NYC

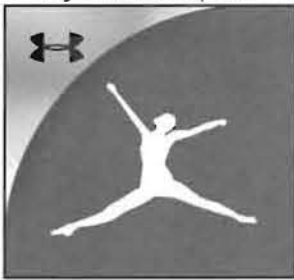

The chances of having service while you’re on the subway are rare. So this app is useful to see where each train stops and knowing where you can transfer to another train for free. The last thing you want to do is get on the wrong train and lose a swipe on your MetroCard.

Mint

Mint synchronizes to your bank account, allowing you to not only know how much money you have, but create budgets and track where all of your money is going. Instead of being surprised about having $10 left in your account, you can see that you spent $300 in the past month.

Myfitnesspal

Pizza and cookies in the dining hall are delicious. However, your body will eventually be affected by bottomless dessert options. This is a great app to track your workouts and what you’re eating. You can find a list of all of the caloric content of your food at Wagner on the dining services section of the Wagner website.

Yelp

This is the best way to find a good place to eat in the city. This app runs off of people’s ratings and suggestions. If a restaurant has hundreds of high reviews on Yelp, then it’s probably a good place to eat. You can also scroll through photos to see what your next meal will look like.

GrubHub

Don’t feel like getting out of bed on the weekends or calling for your food? This app is perfect for ordering take-out. You’d be surprised by all of the great choices you have at your fingertips!

Venmo

Venmo is an app that syncs to your bank account without any fees and allows you to pay back friends in seconds. This is helpful if you decide to order some delicious New York pizza with friends and don’t feel like paying a $3 ATM fee to take out $20.

HopStop

This is the perfect app for New York City explorers. It shows you all of the best ways to get around in the city. It has all subway and bus information and can even estimate the length of a cab ride.

Groupon

Everyone knows Groupon is great for good deals. The great thing about Groupon is that it encourages you to do different activities in the city for a reasonable price. They have endless deals for restaurants in all five boroughs.

TodayTix

All of the theatre experts know that TodayTix is the way to go. This is the best way to see amazing Broadway and off-Broadway shows on a college student’s budget. You can even book a ticket on the same day of the show.

Coins and MetroCards: Your new best friends

If you need to get somewhere by bus or train, pack a MetroCard. You can buy a MetroCard at the bookstore, ferry terminal and most delis. One ride will cost $2.75, so it's a good idea to get a MetroCard that has at least $10 on it and you won't have to worry about it running out as quickly. There are machines at the ferry terminal where you can add value to your MetroCard, so do not throw out the card once it has depleted. If you do not have a MetroCard, remember the bus only accepts coins. To board the local train you only have to pay once at the terminal.

Keeping active and healthy at Wagner

Graduate Sam Bolden shoots hoops to keep up his physique.

Whether you are looking to avoid the infamous freshman 15 (pounds) or looking to maintain a healthy lifestyle as you begin your college career, Wagner offers many ways to maintain a healthy body. Here are some options to stay in shape on campus:

On-campus workout facilities

Wagner offers multiple places to work out. Hameline Field has a 400-meter track open to runners and walkers who prefer to be outside. The track is available for student use unless it is being used by the athletic teams or if the gate to access the track is locked. It is usually open from early morning until late night. In the Spiro Sports center, Wagner has a gym that is equipped with cardio machines, weight machines and free weights. Wagner also has an indoor pool, located in the basement of Spiro Sports Center. While the pool is used for athletic teams during their respective seasons, it is often open for public swim.

Writer's Tip: Make sure to check online for open swim times because they change every month. For people who tend to be gym shy, mid-morning is when the gym tends to be the least busy.

Healthy eating with your meal plan

Healthy eating can go out the window pretty quickly at college, but there are lots of healthy eating options available to Wagner students. The dining hall offers a wide selection of healthy dishes, including a large salad bar stocked with fruit and vegetables and a separate fridge stocked with vegan and gluten-free meals. The Hawk's Nest also offers healthy meals to-go, including prepacked sandwiches, salads and wraps. This serves as a great alternative for busy students trying to be healthy on the go.

Writer's Tip: Make a schedule of when you can enjoy good and bad foods. For example, eat healthy weekdays and allow yourself to indulge in bad eating on Saturdays and Sundays.

Get active by exploring

Wagner is surrounded by parkland that can be used for exercise or just getting outside. Down the hill, Clove Lake Park stretches across about 200 acres, with paths running through the woods and around the lake. Silver Lake Park is also right down the hill with trails, tennis courts and sports fields open to the public. Staten Island also has the South Beach Boardwalk.

The two-mile long boardwalk is frequented by bikers and runners, and it provides a clear view of the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge. Manhattan offers plenty of great places to stay active. If you are willing to take the ferry and subway ride, you can spend a day exploring Central Park. There is the High Line, a mile and a half long park built on a discontinued train track that is elevated above the ground.

Intramural Sports

Wagner offers a wide variety of intramural sports. In the past, we offered soccer, basketball, flag football and frisbee. You can join a team or make your own school team to practice and compete with. Information about intramural sports is updated as the year goes on, through emails, the Daily Bulletin and posts around school.

Writer's Tip: If the sport you love isn't being offered, get a group together and organize it yourself!

Join a club!

Wagner has a long list of clubs for students with all interests. Some high-interest organizations on campus include:

The Wagnerian – The official newspaper of Wagner College, ranked among the top 20 college newspaper in the United States by The Princeton Review Board. The Wagnerian publishes every two weeks papers discussing important on-campus news and current world events.

Greek Life – Wagner has four sororities, four fraternities and one co-ed service fraternity. Each organization is either local, national or international. These organizations give students a “family” feel to their college experience.

Performance Clubs – If you have some hidden talents in the fine arts, then these particular clubs might appeal to you. Dance Club is a group which performs at sporting events on campus. Vocal Synergy, Bassic and Fermata Nowhere are campus acapella groups that provide entertainment and shows for the student body. Completely Student Productions and Student Run Musical Theatre allow those who love theatre to perform in student-run plays.

Lifestyle Clubs – These clubs include Wagner College Republicans, History Club, Hillel Club, Muslim Student Association, Generation Citizen, College Campus Activity Board, Fellowship of Christian Athletes and many more.

Student Government Association – This board of elected senators serve as the voice of the student body and present concerns and complaints to the school's administration. There are five elected representatives for each grade level, so SGA will be looking for freshman candidates to fulfill five open slots on their board.

Pre-Professional Clubs – If you are looking to join a group of people who share your passion for education and future professional programs, then these are the clubs you should be looking into. Wagner has a Physician Assistant Association, Pre-Dental Society, Pre-Health Society, Pre-Law Society and Student Nursing Association.

For more club information, check your emails frequently and keep an eye out for emails from Co-Curricular Programs and The Daily Bulletin. Also, you can visit wagner.edu/sga/clubs-organizations for a complete list of clubs.

A blast into Wagner's past

Wagner College was founded in 1883 with just six students enrolled. Today, Wagner boasts over 2,000 students and you're one of them.

Students enjoy each other's company at Guil-den, Wagner College's snack bar located in the basement of Main Hall on May 30, 1946.

The library was located on the 3rd floor of Main Hall. The picture's date is unknown.

Here are the first women enrolled at Wagner College posing in front of Main Hall in the 1930s.

The greased pole climb was a part of freshmen orientation in the 1950s.

In the 1920s, the dining hall was located in Cunard Hall.
