QUILL AND SCROLL SOCIETY

The Quill and Scroll Society, a national honor society for high school journalists, was organized in Iowa 10 April 1926 by high school supervisors for the purpose of "encouraging and rewarding individual achievement in journalism" and allied fields. The E. C. Glass High School Chapter was organized in 1928, under the leadership of Evelyn L. MOORE, a teacher of English at the school.

The E. C. Glass High School Chapter was established "to instill in students the ideal of scholarship, to advance the standard of journalism, and to promote exact thinking and clear forceful writing." Membership requirements were to be in the upper third of the junior class, to have done outstanding work in journalism, to have the recommendation of the supervisor, and to be approved by the national secretary.

In 1951, the Glass High School Chapter of the Quill and Scroll Society was known as the Carter GLASS Chapter.
