ASSOCIATION FOR COMPUTING MACHINERY

As a new group at LIT, the ACM has defined its goals as follows: to increase members' knowledge of information processing, and to share knowledge with others. The group is concerned with all facets of the field; design, development, construction and application of technology. In 1986-87 members volunteered to introduce faculty and staff members to the mysteries of the VAX. Other activities included helping high school students to run FORTRAN programs and tours of the Maccabees Data Processing Center and the Lake Orion GM robotics plant. A bake sale and a balloon sale were held to raise funds.

AMERICAN CHEMICAL SOCIETY

The ACS has combined educational and recreational objectives since 1971. The Society gives students a chance to experience job situations, exposing them to industrial and academic opportunities. In 1986-87 the group invited several speakers, had a fall hayride, saw related films, took industrial tours, and planned a spring break trip.

NATIONAL SOCIETY OF PROFESSIONAL ENGINEERS

The NSPE reopened at LIT in 1984. The group's goals are to increase membership, to start a new chapter at another school, and to provide a connection between students and professionals for easier transition into the workplace. The NSPE hosted Mr. Jerry Dolby, a project engineer on the Zilwaukee bridge, as a speaker. The group participated in the EIT Review lecture series and dinner meetings with the parent (Oakland) chapter as well.

TECH NEWS

The Tech News keeps the LIT student body informed, amused and interested. The staff spends its time writing, typing, photographing, developing, composing, listening, solving and sleeping.

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF CIVIL ENGINEERS

The LIT chapter of the ASCE helps to keep students abreast of technical and professional advances taking place throughout all phases of civil engineering. 1986-87 activities included sponsoring guest speakers, designing and building a steel bridge model for competition, and participation in the annual concrete canoe construction and race. Officers were: Brian Biasutto, president; Kirk Steudle, vice president; Mary Kay Rossman, secretary; and Kelly Smith, treasurer. Faculty advisor was Professor George Bowden.

The ASPA works to promote educational and other non-profit purposes by providing a structure for LIT students to consult together concerning activities, needs and problems of personnel management. The group sponsored a Financial Career Workshop, introducing management students to 16 financial sector professionals. Members also sponsored Placement Office career presentations and sold flowers to raise funds. Officers for 1986-87 were: Suzanne Enciso, president; Sharon Ameloot, vice president; Catherine Freeman, secretary; and Barbara Noll, treasurer. Professor Douglass Koch was the faculty advisor.

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF PERSONNEL ADMINISTRATION

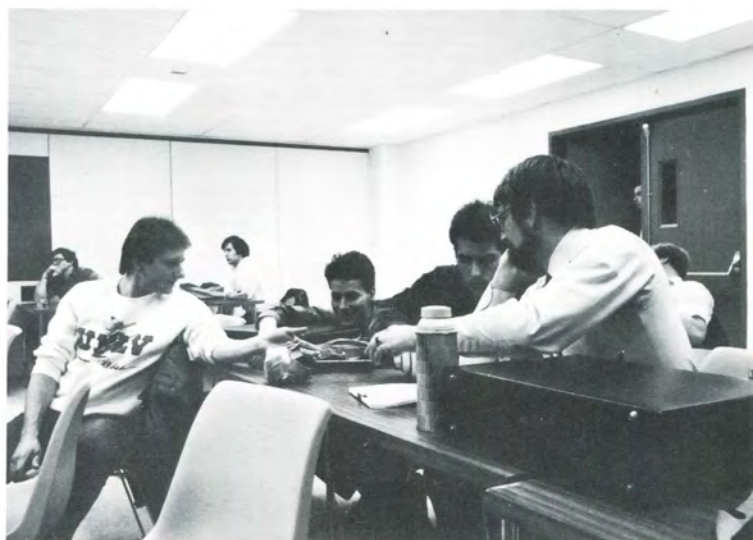

CHI OMEGA RHO

Founded in 1978, Chi Omega Rho fosters academic and social goals within the group. The sorority makes annual donations to charity. In 1986-87, Children's Hospital was the recipient of money raised. Members participated in a ski outing, the annual formal, and a weekend retreat. Officers were: Marie Lezotte, president; Cheryl Oliver, vice president; Jacqueline Christian, secretary; and Carol St. Germain, treasurer. Nabil Hachem was the faculty advisor.

INSTITUTE OF ELECTRICAL AND ELECTRONIC ENGINEERS/ COMPUTER SCIENCE

Founded in 1982, the LIT chapter of IEEE/CS is directed toward advancement of the theory and practice of electrical engineering. Emphasis is placed on computer engineering and computer science. The group seeks to promote understanding of the influence of computer technology on the public welfare. Members participated in the Blue Devils Road Rally, fall and spring Euchre Tournaments, and tours and seminars. Rafic Bazzi was the 1986-87 faculty advisor. Officers were: Mallory Mitchell, president; Don Schneider, vice president; Wendy Palm, secretary; and Paul Salisbury, treasurer.

Commencement Address and Donley, ME '43

noon ladies and gentlemen, Congratulations to the graduates of Lawrence of Technology, the School of Business Administration, the School of Engineering, the School of Architecture, the School of Management. LIT '87 is a proud class in the history of Lawrence Tech!

Dr. Gresham's comments were so touching. I suppose that's why they were about me!

Nevertheless, I would like to ask your brief indulgence to be able to respond with a short resume of my history at Lawrence Tech in partial response to the comments which Dr. Gresham made. Lawrence Tech makes a difference. In 1939 when I graduated from high school in that post-Depression period, attending college was beyond my reach, or my family's reach, economically. So I joined what was in those times an organization called the Civilian Conservation Corps, which was run by the United States government and endeavored to keep young people who did not have employment and who did not have the means to go on to higher education, for those young people to be taken off the streets of our cities. I completely reconciled myself to the idea that my life would not include a college education.

That summer, the war was starting in Europe and recruiters came to the CCC camp from the Merchant Marine to recruit young people to serve on armed convoy convoys which were taking military equipment and other materiel across

North Atlantic through the German marine blockades. The pay that was was $350 a month—which like in those times, those pre-days, an enormous amount.
was in the process of seriously considering going into that field. I was and confident, and hopeful, and there were German submarines the North Atlantic, but I thought I be lucky—I hoped I would be
y. At that time I received, in response to an application that I had made some months earlier to Lawrence Tech, the award of a scholarship toward the first year's tuition.

Now, it may surprise and thrill members of the Class of '87 to know that the tuition in those days was $165 a year. We were getting a bargain, I guess it must seem to you today. But I accepted that scholarship. I gave up the idea of further service in the Civilian Conservation Corps. I gave up the idea of service in the U.S.
Merchant Marine, and I came to Lawrence Tech. That event changed my life, and changed it utterly. The events of the same kind—the entrance into and graduation from this College—has no question influenced constructively the lives of thousands of graduates of this College in the intervening years.

And I have no doubt that your graduation today, after all the struggle and sacrifice which you have made to reach this milestone will clearly, in my view, effectively, constructively, influence your careers for the rest of your lives—and I congratulate you again. I congratulate your parents, your spouses, your children that many of you have, for supporting you during the hard years of sacrifice that you have diligently pursued to reach this standard today.

Now we Americans, in the summer of 1987, are celebrating another important milestone in our country's history—not only your graduation and other graduations across this nation. I think it's worthwhile to pause for a moment and consider that 200 years ago this very day and this very week the delegates to our first constitutional convention, our first Congress, were meeting in Philadelphia and debating, and before the summer was out had created the United States Constitution.

George Washington wrote a letter that fall to his old comrade-in-arms from the Revolutionary War, Count de Lafayette, who was by then ensconced back in his family's estates in France, and Washington said, "A miracle, a miracle has occurred in Philadelphia."
And what a miracle it was.

Now the fact of the matter is that there were not very many Americans in 1787—only a few citizens in those 13 original states along the Atlantic seacoast. I dare say that almost all of us in this room are descended from ancestors who did not live in the United States 200 years ago when that miracle was created at Philadelphia.

What a beacon was erected. A beacon which illuminated the whole world—illuminated the world not only here at home, but overseas where most of our ancestors lived. And they came by the millions attracted by that beacon—that beacon that assured human freedom and human prosperity.
We built under that beacon and this flag this nation, which has achieved the most prosperous, most free society in human history.

Our ancestors fled in many cases from poverty and oppression, and as Thurgood Marshall, a black Justice of the Supreme Court, has reminded us recently and painfully, some Americans were brought in chains. But nevertheless, over the decades and over those two centuries, we have achieved a society here which is the envy of the rest of the world. And it's that society, which you, as graduates of this College this year, are stepping into.

Now, some ask today whether it's worthwhile, whether America has fallen behind, whether America is going to be, in the future, competitive. Or, whether we're going to be a nation of, as some people say, hamburger flippers with an ever-diminishing standard of living.

I don't believe that for one moment, although I understand why the question is being raised.

We were so prosperous in the United States for so long that many elements of our society took our well-being too much for granted. Management of many corporations became careless, leadership in many elements of labor become arrogant. Many elements of our government took our prosperity for granted and did not continue to pay attention to the legal requirements, tax laws, economic policies and so forth upon which any nation's system has to be built if it's going to remain prosperous.

But we've gone through the cold shock of that experience during the past decade, and as I have traveled around the United States in the past two or three years on behalf of our company, on behalf of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, I've been heartened indeed to hear from company after company, from labor group after labor group, from industry after industry, about improvements in productivity and enhanced organizational structure which are, indeed, returning the United States to a position of world leadership.

The Reagan Administration was slow to react to the needs of providing a level playing field for American industry in world markets. But the Reagan Administration finally has saddled up; and is riding on this issue. As the President said in his State of the Union message, and as he repeated in the competitiveness proposal he made to the Congress a few weeks ago, this Administration is going to take the steps to make it possible for the American individual and the American individual corporation to be competitive in world markets.

Our strength in this country lies in our technology. That's why those of you in this class, graduating from an institution called Lawrence Institute of Technology, have a competitive edge over other individuals even in our own society who do not have the advantage of a technology-related education.

We spend in the United States about $85 billion annually in research and development. That's more than the combined research and development expenditures in Japan, Britain, France, and Germany all put together.

Technology is one leg of America's strength, and if we play that technology card in the future, which we're doing more and more, we will see a continuing restoration of American competitiveness and American prosperity.

The other leg of our prosperity is the marvelous entrepreneurial spirit that exists in this country. We take it for granted, yet it's the envy of the rest of the world.

During the past 15 years, we have created 30 million new jobs in the United States. Nothing like that has happened anywhere else on earth. In Japan there's been an increase of about one percent in net new jobs during that period. In the Common Market of Western Europe, a decline of about one percent in net new jobs has occurred.

One of America's competitive advantages is that within this entrepreneurial arena we are able to use, without the cultural impediments that affect our world competitors, the female side of our society. Forty percent of these new jobs have gone to women entering the work force, in many cases for the first time, at all levels—from clerical to professional. This phenomenon has increased the growth rate of our gross national product and created tens of millions of two-wage-earner families. Without that phenomenon and the entrepreneurial spirit which is part and parcel of it, our economy would be in much worse condition than it is.

Now, I don't know for certain why this entrepreneurial spirit is as strong in America as it is, and why it is so weak in the rest of even the industrialized sectors of the world. Some sociologists say that it is something that our ancestors brought with them when they came to this new continent. After all, they were the individuals in a given village or a given farm in some country in the Old World who, from among their neighbors, had the courage and the will to stand up and embark upon the dangerous and threatening trek to the New World. So maybe we are, as Americans, more willing to take new things—to embark on new entrepreneurial endeavors than the rest of mankind.

Alexis de Tocqueville, the French author and philosopher, wrote on this subject when he visited the United States in 1831, and I'm going to read you just one paragraph from what he said.

"The American is," de Tocqueville said, "born often under another sky, placed in the middle of an always moving scene, himself driven by the irresistible torrent which draws all about him. The American has no time to tie himself to anything. He grows accustomed only to change, and even by regarding it as a natural state of man. He feels the need of it. More, he loves it. For the instability, instead of meaning disaster to him as to his brothers in Europe, seems to give him only to miracles all about him."

Well, I don't know whether Dr. Tocqueville's analysis of the American is right for sure. But I know that technology and entrepreneurship are a roll in America. We're all benefiting from it. And you, entering into this world with the degrees which you are receiving from Lawrence Tech today, are going to be part of that opportunistic glowing world that American entrepreneurship and American technology is continuing to accelerate in this country.

Finally, I want to quote from one of my great heroes, Winston Churchill. In the darkest hours of World War II, in 1940 when the Nazi armies were amassing on the English Channel for the expected invasion of Britain, Churchill said, "If we can stand up to him," (meaning of course Hitler,) "all may be free, and the life of the world may move forward into broad sunlit uplands."

I think maybe that Churchill had a vision of a sunlit day like that that we're experiencing here in Detroit today. Those sunlit uplands beckon to all of us in the West. They beckon to all of you, graduates of this College at this time. Those sunlit uplands draw us toward the dawn of the 21st Century where you will spend most of your working lives.

I'm optimistic that with all of the education, all of the human resources and human will that we have here in the United States of America, that all of us, including you, the members of LIT '87, and our children and our grandchildren, will have a rewarding life in the rest of this century, and in that new century which lies just over the horizon.

Congratulations to you ladies and gentlemen. Best wishes to you, and God bless you.

Lawrence Institute of Technology Alumni Association

Congratulations and welcome...

Dear Graduate:

Congratulations! Welcome to the Lawrence Institute of Technology Alumni Association.

You may not realize it, but you're someone special! Of the billions of people walking the earth, you're only one of some 15,000 who have graduated from LIT since it opened in 1932.

All of us have shared unique experiences — we've survived the rigors of demanding curricula and obtained a highly respected degree. It is this "uncommonness" that helps to draw LIT men and women together in a special and lasting way. Giving expression to this special bond is the Alumni Association.

Your Alumni Association extends a complimentary one year active membership to all graduates of the Class of 1987. Thereafter, a yearly contribution to the College's program for annual giving will keep your membership active and allows you to participate in the variety of programs we sponsor throughout the year — social activities as well as services such as a merchandise discount program, group travel, and more.

Please accept our sincere best wishes for your future, and our hope that you'll make the LIT Alumni Association a part of your "post graduate" life. Let us know of any changes in your address, status, etc. so that we can keep in touch.

Sincerely,

Henry Selewonik, IM '57

*Congratulations to the Class of 1987
from the LIT Presidents Club*

The Presidents Club is proud of you, and proud of the excellent education you received at Lawrence Institute of Technology.

The mission of the LIT Presidents Club is to encourage and recognize generous support for the College. Established in 1974 by 90 alumni and friends, the Club now numbers more than 675 members throughout the nation. We invite you to consider becoming a member.

Tuition alone did not cover the full cost of your education. During your college years, dedicated LIT alumni and friends gave more than $5 million for scholarships, new buildings and enhancement of academic programs. Your support after graduation will help future generations of students.

Congratulations on your achievement and best wishes for success.
